

Death knell sounded for Tocks Dam

By STEVE DRACHLER
Pocono Record Reporter

NEWARK, N. J. — The future of the Tocks Island Dam was dealt "a mortal wound" Thursday when three of the four Delaware River basin governors said they do not want to dam the Delaware River.

The lone supporter of the controversial $400 million project was Pennsylvania Gov. Milton J. Shapp, who said "time is going to show Tocks Island would have been a great benefit."

The 3-1 decision, with the U.S. Department of the Interior abstaining, may have been the final blow to the project proposed in 1961 by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

New Jersey Gov. Brendan T. Byrne, considered the key to the project's future, announced the Delaware River Basin Commission's decision following a private two-hour meeting of the states in a Newark Hotel Thursday.

Byrne, who had not stated an unequivocal position prior to the session, said there are viable alternatives to building a 160 foot-high earthen dam across the Delaware River north of Shawnee-on-Delaware.

Byrne cited environmental concerns as his main reason for voting against the project.

The New Jersey governor added his much-publicized canoe trip down the Delaware last summer also contributed to his decision against the proposal. He said he was "impressed" by the area during the visit.

Shapp said he still believes environmental questions raised during the past three years could be effectively answered and the dam still built.

But when asked what he now thought about the project's future, the governor replied Tocks "is mortally wounded and in danger of dying."

He said he will submit a report to Congress outlining his views on the project, but added he does not expect to begin a strong lobbying effort pushing the Tocks issue.

The four governors had been ordered by Congress to submit their recommendations by August 28. Their action comes several weeks after the release of a 3,000-page comprehensive study of Tocks by several New York City based consulting firms.

Tocks Island Dam and lake was planned to provide flood control, water supply, electrical power and recreation for the four river basin states.

After announcing the stand he, New York Gov. Hugh Carey and Delaware Gov. Sherman Tribbett were taking, Byrne said he has ordered (N.J.) Department of Environmental Protection Commissioner David Bardin to begin work on a flood plain zoning plan and a long range water supply plan.

Byrne said New Jersey will not be needing water Tocks would have provided for 25 to 50 years and that flood plain zoning would do a better job of protecting life and property downstream than a dam.

Shapp disagreed. He said if a storm comparable to Tropical Storm Agnes struck the Delaware Valley, Philadelphia could be buried under six to eight feet of water and Easton might be wiped off of the map.

He also said he did not know how Pennsylvania was going to obtain water to meet Philadelphia's future needs without Tocks.

Representing Carey at the meeting was New York's environmental commissioner, former congressman Ogden Reid.

"This is an important decision for the environment," Reid said. "The environmental dangers from Tocks are significant, dangerous and persistent."

Reid said viable alternatives for water supply and flood control through zoning are readily available.

"Recreation is just as good, if not better, with a free flowing river," he added.

Tribbett pointed to statements made by the federal Environmental Protection Agency and the Council on Environmental Quality for his supporting Byrne's position.

"We are the least affected," the Delaware governor said. "We could have stayed neutral, but that would have looked like indecisiveness." Tribbett said he went along with Byrne because New Jersey would be greatly affected by the dam and lake.

The Department of the Interior, which normally has a vote on commission matters, abstained from voting on the Tocks issue.

"It is the states' decision," said Thomas Schweigert, representing the department. "We don't want to cram this thing down the states' throats."

Schweigert declined to give the department's view on Tocks Island. He said it would "serve no good purpose."

After making the announcement of the commission's position, Byrne explained what happens next to the Tocks proposal.

The DRBC decision is not the final say, he warned to the group of anti-dam lobbyists attending the press conference.

Congress will make the final decision after receiving reports from the governors, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers and other involved agencies.

Before the governors and advisors met in a hotel conference room, an estimated 200 AFL-CIO labor representatives from New Jersey lined both sides of the hotel entrance.

After learning Byrne had used a different entrance and would not be confronting them, the pro-dam group dispersed, carrying away their bright colored banners and placards.

Ford expected to veto House vote

Oil price control extended

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House voted 303 to 117 Thursday to extend current price controls on domestic oil for six months. But White House press secretary Ron Nessen, in Helsinki, said President Ford will veto it and let prices seek their own level.

Energy chief Frank Zarb said Thursday that level may reach 70 cents a gallon by this winter because of the House rejection late Wednesday of Ford's plan to permit gradual decontrols over a 39-month period.

"It's all over," Nessen said, as far as controls on domestic oil production are concerned.

He said Ford will veto any bill which comes to him for a simple extension of the price ceilings, which are due to expire Aug. 31.

The House vote rejecting Ford's plan was 228 to 189, but the vote Thursday on a temporary extension of present law was 23 votes more than needed to override a veto if the margin holds up.

The Senate passed a similar bill July 15 on a vote of 62 to 29 — also large enough to override unless some votes are switched.

The House vote came on a bill extending the Emergency Petroleum Allocation Act, under which controls are written, from Aug. 31 this year to March 1, 1976.

"For the Congress to fail to do this would constitute the basis for economic disaster in this country," Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., told the House.

But Republican leader John J. Rhodes of Arizona said the only way out of oil problems is to lift price controls and let a free market stimulate domestic oil supplies.

At a breakfast meeting with reporters Thursday, Zarb said the President has no choice but to let controls lapse Aug. 31 when the oil allocation act expires.

Zarb said the big impact of lifting price controls will not hit the consumer all at once, but that gasoline prices could rise to 70 cents a gallon within six to nine months.

Some economists say retail gasoline prices would rise as much as 10 or 12 cents a gallon almost immediately and have an inflationary impact throughout the economy because fuel costs are an element in the prices of most products.

Senate barely votes to lift embargo on Turkish arms

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Thursday night approved a partial lifting of the Turkish arms embargo, but chances of congressional passage before a month-long recess were all but killed by stalling tactics in the House.

Efforts by the House Republican leadership to assure that the issue would be taken up today were blocked by opponents of the measure. Rules Committee Chairman Ray Madden, D-Ind., refused to call a meeting which would have allowed a majority to decide the issue today, the last day before a month-long recess.

As a result of Madden's refusal, the House would have to pass the administration-backed compromise by a two-thirds margin, considered an impossibility.

The actions followed a frantic day of administration lobbying, including phone calls from President Ford's traveling White House in Helsinki, aimed at mollifying the Turkish government, which has taken control of some 24 American bases there because of the continuing embargo.

The House, which last week refused to lift the ban, waited late into the night for Senate action on the bill.

Plan unveiled to ease canning lid shortage

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government and Goodwill Industries of America Inc. Thursday announced a plan to ease the nationwide shortage of canning jar lids.

Under the arrangement, Goodwill's Minneapolis office will serve as a temporary distribution for 2.8 million lids. They will be sold by mail order in nine dozen lots, on a first come, first serve basis for $4 plus $1 for postage and handling.

And unprecedented demand for lids has dried up supplies in many parts of the country even though manufacturers are working three shifts seven days a week to try to catch up. The surge in home gardening and canning that has paralleled rising food prices, plus some apparent hoarding of lids, has been blamed for the shortages.

Lids can only be used once but canning jars, which are available everywhere, can be recycled.

Goodwill is buying the lids at the normal wholesale price of 19 to 23 cents a dozen from three manufacturers — Ball Corp., Muncie, Ind., Bernardin Inc., Evansville, Ind., and Owens-Illinois, Toledo, Ohio. Several other manufacturers were asked to participate in the program by the Commerce Department but were refused.

Long-time Tocks foe

Mrs. Shukaitis all smiles

NEWARK, N. J. — Nancy Shukaitis was all smiles Thursday afternoon. She had just viewed the downfall of her long-time enemy — the Tocks Island Dam.

Mrs. Shukaitis, who helped organize and lead a 13-year fight against the $400 million federal project, was smiling and accepting congratulations after the Delaware River Basin Commission voted 3-1 against asking Congress to approve construction of the dam.

"This makes me very happy," she said outside of the room where the decision was announced.

"I really don't know what to think of it all yet. But it is good."

Mrs. Shukaitis' fight against the dam led to her being elected a Monroe County commissioner in 1967 and she is seeking a third term on the three-member board this year.

Born and raised in the river valley, near the spot the federal government had hoped to build a 160 foot-high dam and flood 10,000 acres, she became active in the anti-dam movement shortly after Congress authorized the project in the early 1960s.

As the years passed and her fight to beat off the threat of a flooded valley grew, she became known throughout the Delaware Valley as a staunch opponent.

The House has already voted more than $4 million for the DWGNRA this year, which should be enough to wrap up the land acquisition, but the Senate has not yet acted on the measure.

Then again, it is impossible to compute the hundreds of thousands of dollars which were pumped into Tocks in other ways, such as the litigation against squatters, extra police protection, and the actual eviction of the squatters by U.S. marshals.

During the same time, the Park Service has spent $52 million on the national park, including $41.6 million for land, $3.4 million in administrative costs, and $5.2 million for development.

Another $2.98 million was transferred to the Army Corps last year after Congress cut off all funds for the project. This money was needed to settle debts with property owners whose land had been purchased but not paid for.

It is doubtful that there would be any opposition to this move, since the land acquired for Tocks is located within the surrounding national park, and could be absorbed with little difficulty.

47,947 acres acquired
The latest report by the Army Corps shows that 47,947 acres have been acquired so far out of the total 72,000-acre project area, at a cost of $90,558,831. This includes both projects.

By the end of the last fiscal year, the Army had spent $53,994,000 on Tocks Island. That included $43.3 million for land acquisition, $1.17 million for supervision and administration, $8.63 million on engineering and design, and $891,000 for miscellaneous costs such as removal of buildings.

Grain sale impact minimized

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An Agriculture Department official said Thursday the sale of grain to Russia will have little impact on American food prices, but he acknowledged some other government agencies are not so certain of that.

Richard Bell, assistant secretary of agriculture, gave sworn testimony at a Senate investigations subcommittee hearing into the latest huge grain sale. He said the American harvest promises to be so large that the shipment of a potential 15 million tons of wheat, corn and barley to the Soviet Union would cause only a "minimal" bulge in food prices.

His view was shared by Paul MacAvoy, a member of the President's Council of Economic Advisers. He said even if the sale equalled the 19 million ton sale of 1972 it would take a big harvest failure in Europe or Asia to reduce U.S. inventories to the point that prices here would rise substantially.

Agriculture Secretary Earl Buttz, in a speech in Williamsburg, Va., said the sale cannot cause a rumup of U.S. food prices.

"Some people who don't know wheat from chaff are drawing ridiculous conclusions," he said.

Bell told the Senate hearing the 1972 Russian grain deal has taken unwarranted blame for the 24 per cent increase in food prices which has occurred since then.

Under questioning, Bell said some fellow officials on the Economic Policy Board — which has representation from the State Department, the Council of Economic Advisers, the Central Intelligence Agency and the Office of Management and Budget — fear the sale "might cause problems later on."

But those agencies were "not following grain developments as closely" as Agriculture does, he said.

The hearing was called two days after Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve, said he feared the sale would have a sizable effect on food prices and one day after General Mills raised wholesale flour prices by 1.6 cents a pound.

Bell said it is "unfortunate" that General Mills tied its announcement to the Russian grain sale. And he said he did not know where Burns got his information.

Egyptians, Israelis agree on basic pact for truce

By United Press International

The United States Thursday relayed Israel's latest Sinai troop withdrawal proposals to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, bringing Egypt and Israel in basic agreement for a new truce but still split on details that threatened the entire package, diplomatic sources in Cairo said.

Despite the negotiations, violence and threats of violence in the Middle East continued.

In Beirut, Palestinian guerrillas said they bombed Jerusalem's central bus station Thursday, killing and wounding several Israelis and damaging buses. Jerusalem police said an 11 a.m. time bomb damaged a bench in the bus station but caused no casualties.

The Israeli military command reported that gunners in Lebanon fired small arms at an Israeli army unit patrolling the northern frontier during the night but did not inflict casualties.

In Tel Aviv, a foreign ministry spokesman refused to confirm or deny Thursday's report in the Boston Globe saying Israel's arsenal includes atomic bombs.

"All reports to this effect are based strictly on speculation," he said.

In Cairo, a well-placed diplomatic source said Egypt and Israel were in basic agreement for a second-stage troop withdrawal in the Sinai peninsula but still split on details that could develop into major obstacles.

"The basic elements of an agreement do exist," he said. "But a great deal depends on details which will be the determining factor. If all the details do not fit in the right places, this will distort the basic elements. The picture is not clear yet."

U.S. Ambassador to Egypt Hermann F. Eilts met Sadat and his foreign minister, Ismail Fahmy, at a summer residence in Alexandria to deliver the latest Israeli proposals, which he in turn got from Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger in Bonn last weekend.

New York bites bullet

NEW YORK (UPI) — New York City bit the bullet Thursday, ordering wage freezes for thousands of public workers and hiking subway and bus fares to 50 cents in a desperate attempt to save itself from fiscal disaster.

While many other city unions went along with the voluntary rollback, the police and fire unions balked, forcing Mayor Abe Beame to ask the City Council to impose the freeze.

"There will be a wage freeze — if not voluntary, then imposed," Beame asserted at a City Hall news conference.

"A deal was made sometime during the night which we were not a party to," said Firemen's union chief Michael Maye. He said it would "force us into a position we are not going to accept."

"I don't like the deal as it stands," said Ken McFeeley, head of the policemen's union.

The wage freeze issue has dragged on for days, while municipal bonds issued to bail the New York out of its more immediate debts languished in brokers' vaults. New York has $791 million in short-term notes, most of them held by banks, due Aug. 22. The city's major banks have insisted they won't advance New York any more money unless the city tightens its belt.

For more than a decade the city has been living on borrowed money, and is now in hock by about $7 billion.

Detroit violence leaves broken windows, death

DETROIT (UPI) — Newspaper-patched windows and shards of broken beer bottles glinting in the sun were the only remnants Thursday of two nights of violence in a west side neighborhood that left two persons dead and 11 injured.

"The people don't want any more trouble," the owner of a neighborhood rib shack said. "Now that people see the law works, everything will be just fine."

The second victim of the angry street clashes died early Thursday in a hospital where he lay two days with a fractured skull.

Marion A. Pyszko, a 54-year-old immigrant from Poland, was driving home from his dishwashing job Monday night when a mob of black youths dragged him from his car and beat him with bricks.

Police were seeking a murder warrant against a 16-year-old black youth in connection with the slaying. Other youths involved in the attack on Pyszko also may be charged.

At least 112 persons were arrested during the disturbance and dozens of businesses vandalized. Fire officials estimated total damage at $20,000.

The slaying of a black teenager by a white bar owner Monday night was the first that ignited the predominantly black neighborhood into a series of street fights with riot-gear police for two consecutive nights.

Police said neighborhood residents cooled down after bar owner Andrew Chinarian, 39, was re-arrested and his bond raised from $500 to $25,000.

Chinarian was charged with second-degree murder in the shooting death of Obie Wynn, 18. Chinarian told police he shot the youth because he was tampering with a car in the bar's parking lot.

Leaders of the black groups that launched rock-and-bottle throwing attacks on police and burned and looted markets and shops said they would not stop fighting until Chinarian was brought to justice.

"I think what we've seen here has been a sort of coming together, that a city in considerable pain can band together and turn a negative situation into a positive one," said Mayor Coleman A. Young, Detroit's first black mayor.

Police said they anticipate no more major problems in the area, and may begin pulling off hundreds of officers who worked 12-and-18 hour shifts during the peak of the disturbances.

Nothing to link him to spy charge

Hiss finally sees 'pumpkin papers'

NEW YORK (UPI) — Alger Hiss said Thursday there was nothing in the three rolls of microfilm of the so-called "Pumpkin Papers" that could link him to Soviet espionage operations.

Hiss, a former "boy wonder" of the State Department who was convicted of perjury in January, 1950, in connection with Soviet espionage operations, told a news conference that he examined for the first time Thursday the three rolls of microfilm in the U.S. Attorney's office.

Hiss said his examination proved to him that "they were certainly useless for espionage."

Hiss, who was imprisoned for 44 months after the celebrated trial, sought the film in an effort to clear his name 25 years later. The news conference was held at the offices of the National Emergency Civil Liberties Foundation, which is representing Hiss in his legal fight.

Hiss told newsmen that the microfilm contained information from the Navy Department on such innocent items as fire extinguishers, life rafts and fuel system valves.

He said these strips and two others, which were used as evidence in his trial, in no way supported the charges of Whittaker Chambers "that I had been a Russian spy."

The papers were supposedly found in a hollowed-out pumpkin on Chambers' Maryland farm. At the time of the incident, Chambers said they were left inside the pumpkin for him by Hiss.

There were five roles of film in all but only two were legible enough to provide reasonable identification of their contents.

These two were used against Hiss in his trial.

Hiss referred particularly to newspaper pictures taken in December, 1948, of then Congressman Richard M. Nixon looking at the strips of film through a magnifying glass.

Nixon, then a member of the House Un-American Activities Committee, was quoted as saying that the films represented "documentary evidence of the most serious series of treasonable activities which has been launched against the government in the history of America."

What's news

Farm product prices rise

WASHINGTON — Spurred partly by the impact of new grain sales to Russia, the average of all raw farm product prices rose 3 per cent in the month ending July 15, the Agriculture Department reported Thursday. Officials said higher prices for wheat, soybeans, hogs, potatoes and cotton played a major role in boosting the farm price average for the fourth consecutive month to a level 14 per cent above the 1975 low point last March and 6-per cent above a year earlier. The report said the farm price of wheat, which rose along with other grains in early July in response to rumors of Russian purchases which began July 16, hit $3.33 a bushel July 15 — up 41 cents from June but still 71 cents below a year earlier.

Five die in IRA violence

BELFAST — Five men, including three members of the Irish Republics best known dance band, died Thursday of bombs and bullets in a single incident near the border town of Newry, 30 miles southwest of Belfast. The other two victims were identified as officers of the extremist Protestant Ulster Volunteer Force. Police said the bus carrying the Miami show band back to Dublin after a show in Northern Ireland was stopped on a rural road about 2 a.m. by men in army-type uniforms. The members of the band were lined up along a hedgerow and asked for their names and addresses. Then there was a burst of gunfire and an explosion.

Astronauts frolic about

HONOLULU — America's Apollo astronauts and their families frolicked in a world of their own Thursday at Kaneohe Marine Corps Air Station. Doctors from Tripler hospital and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration arranged to move onto the base to be near the pilots. "This is what we've been hoping for all along," Marjorie Slayton said of the spectacular coastal views the family will have from their isolated beach cottages, a few steps above golden beaches. Faye Stafford, Joan Brand and Mrs. Slayton and their children arrived at sundown Wednesday after an 11-hour flight from Houston. "You look super," Mrs. Brand told her husband as the families hugged for several minutes.

Credit files can be sold

CONCORD, N.H. — The New Hampshire Supreme Court, in a landmark decision, ruled Thursday credit bureaus may sell computerized records of an individual's credit files to other credit companies. Attorney General Warren Rudman immediately called for new consumer protection legislation to guarantee that such records contain accurate, up-to-date and relevant information. The case in question gained national attention when the Credit Bureau of Nashua, Inc., sent letters to 60,000 individuals offering to sell them their own credit records. The letter carried a headline saying "Is Your Privacy in Jeopardy?" It listed the general categories of information contained in the files.

Chivalrous cops

PITTSBURGH — An elderly woman lost her money to a robber — but kindly police saved her dignity. When Mrs. Dorothy Erenrich refused to tell her age to officers investigating a robbery at her store, they graciously listed it as "21-plus" on their crime report. Mrs. Erenrich told police the man entered her store and pulled a gun when she opened a cash register to change a $5 bill for him.

27 die in plane crash

TAIPEI, Taiwan — A Chinese Nationalist airliner carrying 76 passengers and crew members crashed on its second attempt to land in a heavy rainstorm at Taipei International Airport Thursday, killing at least 27 persons, including an American couple. Officials said 48 persons were injured and one person was missing in the crash of the Far Eastern Air Transport Viscount turboprop airliner. The Americans were identified only as Mr. and Mrs. Richard Cehon.

Edgar Buchanan hospitalized

HOLLYWOOD — Character actor Edgar Buchanan underwent surgery Thursday at Hollywood West Hospital to relieve pressure on his brain and was reported resting comfortably after the operation. The surgery involved drilling a small hole in his skull to drain excess fluid. The 72-year-old actor is best known for his portrayal of Uncle Joe on the "Petticoat Junction" television series.

N.H. candidates re-run race for seat in Senate

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — Democrat John Durkin and his GOP opponent Louis Wyman Thursday began the 47-day scramble for votes in a rerun of the closest Senate race in U.S. history.

Durkin concentrated on the Democrat-rich seacoast region. Wyman taped a television broadcast.

Durkin shook the calloused hands of metal workers at the 175-year-old Portsmouth Naval Shipyard, builder of wooden ships in the 19th century and atomic submarines in the 20th.

The 39-year-old former state insurance commissioner borrowed $10,000 "to start setting up a campaign" and immediately lashed out at Wyman's $74,000 "slush fund" raised months ago in response to a nationwide plea by Senate allies.

While Durkin campaigned publicly, Wyman flew from Washington to Boston to tape a televised broadcast before driving 50 miles north to his home in Manchester, New Hampshire's largest city.

Wyman had a 355-vote margin election night, which was reversed in a recount and gave Durkin a 10-vote victory. A state ballot panel controlled by Republicans reversed the Durkin victory and certified Wyman as winner by two votes. Durkin then appealed to the Senate.

The rapid-fire series of developments that led to a repeat of the November election apparently caught political organizers by surprise. After seven-months of tedious Senate review, Durkin Tuesday night dramatically abandoned opposition to a rerun election. The next day the Democrat-controlled Senate approved the new election long-favored by Republicans.

The election was expected Sept. 16, Gov. Meldrim Thomson said, subject to expected approval late Thursday by his Executive Council. Retired Sen. Norris Cotton, 75, R-N.H., a 28-year veteran of Congress, was to return to Washington Aug. 8 to fill the vacancy until a new senator was selected.

Prosecutors work on Little 'escape plan'

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Prosecutors Thursday began trying to prove that Joan Little murdered her jailer in a planned escape—not because he tried to rape her.

Deputy Sheriff Willis Peachy testified the 21-year-old black woman made a murmured telephone call a few hours before 62-year-old white jailer Clarence Alligood was stabbed to death with an icepick in her cell. The prosecution will apparently try to show the call had to do with post-escape plans.

District Attorney William C. Griffin later tried to introduce into evidence books and magazines, including the Bible.

Israel has nuclear weapons

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Israel probably has "at least 10" nuclear weapons and the capability to use them on a number of cities in the Arab world, military expert Dale R. Tahtinen said Thursday.

Tahtinen, a former Defense Intelligence Agency official, is assistant director of foreign and defense policy studies for the American Enterprise Institute, a private research organization.

"They definitely have the weapons," Tahtinen said in a telephone interview. "Now if you want to get into hair-splitting, whether they have 10 or 12 ... I'm not sure. But I'm very confident they have them ... at least 10 is a very reasonable estimate of the number they have."

CIA baffles auditors

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Comptroller General Elmer B. Staats said Thursday that since 1962 government auditors have despaired of piercing the curtain of secrecy around how much the CIA spends and for what purpose.

Staats said his General Accounting Office, which monitors government spending for Congress, also has been unable to produce a breakdown of the budgets of various other federal agencies which engage in intelligence activities.

Staats testified in the first open session of the reconstituted House intelligence committee, whose initial membership was unable to get an inquiry under way because of internal squabbling.

Meantime the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence continued its inquiry into alleged CIA assassination plots, taking closed-session testimony from David A. Phillips, who retired in May as CIA director of Latin American operations.

Staats described in detail for the House panel the GAO's efforts to audit the Central Intelligence Agency, which he said proved fruitless because of the agency's strict secrecy and its director's authorization to make unvouchered payments.

"Therefore," Staats said, "since 1962 the GAO has not conducted any reviews at the CIA nor any reviews which focus specifically on CIA activities, except for the two recent reviews ... which were done at the request of the Special Subcommittee on Intelligence of the House Armed Services Committee."

Effort to alter Supreme Court had unexpected results

By ELDER WITT
Congressional Quarterly

WASHINGTON — One might conclude from reviewing its recent decisions that Richard Nixon had been successful in reshaping the Supreme Court so that it interpreted the law but did not try to rewrite it.

"It is not for us to invade the legislature's province," wrote Justice Byron R. White in a decision limiting the power of federal judges. "Our role is to interpret statutory language, not to revise it," concluded Justices Potter Stewart and Thurgood Marshall in another case.

But like most presidential efforts to remold the court, this one has had unexpected consequences.

Although the court is clearly less activist than during the 1960s, it does not hesitate to wield its power within the confines of its newly defined role. By applying the same literal eye to the guarantees of the Constitution and the language of the laws, the justices found themselves as often on the side of the underdog as on the side of big government or big business.

During its 1974-75 term, four of the court's members spoke out for the majority most often on matters of significance. They were White and Stewart, the most conservative of the justices remaining from the days of the Warren Court, plus Chief Justice Warren E. Burger and Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr.

The difficulty in labeling the present court as liberal or conservative is illustrated by some of their major opinions during the term.

White's approach to cases was often a literal one, which tended to narrow the impact of the resulting decision. One example was the court's long-awaited impoundment ruling. Basing it closely on the 1972 water pollution law at issue, White concluded for the court that in that law Congress left the President no leeway to refuse to spend the funds it allocated. The issue of impoundment of other funds was left unresolved.

Later, White spoke for the court to limit the discretion of federal judges — and the flow of public interest lawsuits. At issue was an award of attorneys' fees to the environmentalists who had challenged the Alaska pipeline, an award assessed against the consortium building the pipeline. White held that unless Congress specifically authorized such awards judges could not make them. This ruling halted a trend toward an increasing number of awards in such cases.

But this literalism was tempered by awareness that the law changes with changing times. In a ruling hailed by women's groups, White reversed a 1961 decision based on the theory that a woman's place is strictly in the home, and not — for example — on juries.

"If it ever were the case that women were unqualified to sit on juries," he wrote, "that time has long since passed." A similar consciousness characterized the rulings which White wrote for the court to establish the rights of students both to challenge charges against them which might result in suspension and to sue school officials for violating their constitutional rights.

Concern for the impact of the law on the individual was reflected in three of Stewart's most important opinions during the term. Spelling out the right of nondangerous mental patients to their freedom, he was definite: "A finding of 'mental illness' alone cannot justify a state's locking a person up against his will and keeping him indefinitely in simple custodial confinement."

With similar reasoning, he spoke for the court when it held that a person had a constitutional right to act as his own lawyer, and when it made back pay awards virtually mandatory in job discrimination suits. In the latter case, Stewart flatly rejected one of employers' chief defenses against charges of discrimination — the argument that they acted in "good faith."

"A worker's injury is no less real," commented Stewart, "simply because his employer did not inflict it in bad faith."

But in other opinions, a deference to congressional intent and constitutional language overrode this concern for the impact which a particular ruling might have on the individual. Stewart did not hesitate to uphold congressional policy favoring women Naval officers over men, or to strike down a state law which would have provided remedial and supplemental services to students in nonpublic schools.

The importance of preserving "the proper — and properly limited — role of the courts in a democratic society" was the basis for one of the court's most controversial rulings during the term, written by Powell.

A divided court dismissed a case challenging a town's zoning ordinance as unfairly exclusionary. The five-man majority for whom Powell wrote the decision found that the plaintiffs had not argued convincingly enough that they actually were affected by the ordinance. Without such a showing, wrote Powell, federal courts would overstep their authority if they got involved.

Yet Powell was not timid in exercising judicial power to restrict the improper exercise of authority by other segments of government. He was emphatic in majority opinions extending the protection of the Fourth Amendment against unreasonable searches and seizures by the U.S. Border Patrol.

"The Fourth Amendment applies to all seizures of the person, including seizures that involve only a brief detention short of traditional arrest," he wrote. By his opinions, the court limited the circumstances under which the border patrol could stop cars either to search them or to question persons about their citizenship.

Deference to the powers of Congress and the President characterized two of the Chief Justice's major opinions during the term.

"In determining the legitimacy of a congressional act we do not look to the motives alleged to have prompted it," he wrote, upholding the power of a congressional committee to subpoena information, including bank records.

Declining to place any restrictions on the President's power of pardon, Burger was similarly adamant. This power "cannot be modified, abridged or diminished by the Congress," he wrote.

Burger, chosen as chief justice for his "hard line" on matters of criminal law, chose to apply the law strictly to white collar crime during the term. Upholding the conviction of a supermarket executive for violations of federal food and drug law, Burger rejected the executive's claim that he should not be convicted without evidence that he actually knew of the conditions which were the basis of the charge.

It was sufficient, wrote Burger, that the executive had the authority to prevent the violation. This was a stiff standard, he conceded, but "no more stringent than the public had a right to expect."

And looking to congressional intent in the antitrust laws, Burger wrote the opinion stripping from the legal profession its immunity to antitrust charges. Finding its minimum fee schedules no more than price-fixing, Burger held that they were clearly a violation of the law.

Education needs an alternative

It doesn't take keen observation to recognize that this decade is turning into a time of turmoil in education. And that much of the upheaval is traceable to the dissatisfaction with which parents increasingly view the educational establishment.

We had a striking example in the Stroudsburg School District a few weeks ago when parents and taxpayers descended on the school board, loudly protesting not only a substantial tax increase but methods, schedules and areas of emphasis on curricula and extra-curricular activities.

Since then, a group of parents is up in arms over plans to alter the kindergarten schedule in Stroudsburg. It is all of a piece with the textbook controversy in Kanawah County, West Virginia. Parents no longer are content to let the school board and administration do pretty much as they please with school systems.

In fact, in Monroe County there is a move toward alternative schools. We already have a Catholic grammar and high school. There is a group in East Stroudsburg that intends to provide extra-curricular classes designed to strengthen patriotism and the place of religion in children's development.

And the pastor of Calvary Bible Church on Franklin Hill in East Stroudsburg has decided that the only answer to the non-religiosity of public school systems is to have the church found a school of its own, designed along the lines of Catholic school systems, we presume.

Perhaps that is precisely the answer to the educational dilemma: alternatives to the all-prevailing public educational system. Not that we ever expect to see such private schools supplant the public school system. But if alternatives are available, it is an incentive for educators to think out their innovations (or lack of innovations) far more completely than they have in the past.

Like it or not, the school is where most of a child's growing up is done nowadays. The family is no longer as strong as it was, either in influence or in standards. But that doesn't mean parents don't want their children imbued with standards of behavior and morality that they themselves hold dear.

Nor does it mean that parents haven't some idea what their children need in the way of skills and capabilities. And who is to say that they are any further away from the mark than many educators who spend their time with behavioral studies, charts, curves and dry statistical data.

The problem with alternative schools is that they are often prohibitively expensive, especially so since taxes still must be paid to support the public school system.

Government aid to non-public schools is the only answer, but there are constitutional problems when church-sponsored schools are involved. It is a problem that must be solved, for the temper of too many parents, especially in the large cities, is growing too hot to be ignored any longer. If the answer is more parental input, let's get after it.

Schools, after all, are no places for complacency. There must be friction and interaction, for those are the signs of energy and progress, the antithesis of loping along in a well-worn rut.

'Truth in politics' nation's greatest reform need of all

Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — It has become part of our political folkways for candidates to spout hokum. For some, lying becomes a habit they cannot break after they are elected to office.

This may explain why so many politicians are willing to place the full weight of the U.S. Government behind flagrant falsehoods. At all levels of government, officials play loose with the truth to cover up mistakes, hide corruption and make bad policies look good.

But let an investigative reporter make a mistake or wrongly condemn someone in authority, and there are howls of outrage. Perhaps we may be excused, therefore, if we occasionally remind our readers who has been telling them the truth.

On March 21, 1972, for example, we reported that International Telephone and Telegraph had feared its assets in Chile might be nationalized if Salvador Allende, a Marxist, were installed as president.

Nader impressive choice for national leadership

Nicholas Von Hoffman

Or there is Scoop Jackson, a gentleman the swinging doors of the AFL-CIO saloon. Do you prefer Jimmy Carter, the Georgia peanut farmer, one of those media creations called a New South Southern Moderate, which should be taken to mean he served his full term as governor without assenting to a lynching. Past Mr. Carter we have the ever-recurring Massachusetts Youngest Brother, whom millions of his fellow citizens believe to be a liar or even a killer. Wouldn't that be an edifying campaign with him running. From '72 to '76, from Watergate to billingsgate.

Also sloshing about in the miasma are: Udall, the Father of Postal Reform, whose friends always tell you how good, how witty, how straight-forward their candidate is . . . in private; Mr. Humphrey, a changed man after political plastic surgery took the Johnson era-Vietnam war wrinkles and stretched them smooth; and poor, dilapidated Fred Harris, the Jerry Ford of the Left.

To impart the illusion of meaning to this game of Wee King of the Midget Mountain, behold the villain, George Wallace. We're instructed that he must be stopped at all costs, which I take to mean somebody like Ed Muskie. In fact, though, since Mr. Wallace has commenced kissing black beauty queens and Chicano babies, one is hard put to see how he differs from his rivals in any important way.

The number of actors in the Republican theatrical is fewer. Here we are invited to imagine that Mr. Rockefeller and Reagan disagree with each other. To steal William Allen White's epigram, "Between them is that fantastic imaginary gulf that has always existed between Tweedle-Dum and Tweedle-Dee."

Two strikes against Nader

One leader, Brother Theodore excepted, hasn't died yet. He is Ralph Nader, against whose candidacy you only hear the argument that the office of the American Presidency is not available to one so virtuous and able. As a people, it is said, we love politicians who proclaim their dedication, but are careful not to live it. We can't tolerate a man like Nader, who earns a quarter of a million dollars a year, lives on $100 a week, and gives all the rest away.

Too blunt, too honest. A President who writes his own speeches, who knows so much that, instead of being dependent on being briefed like the pinheads and fruit flies who hover over the White House punch bowl, Nader can brief his briefers. No, can't be, Lincoln's dead, as Brother Theodore might say.

What kind of campaign would Nader wage, what kind of Administration would he run? Hays Gorey of Time Magazine speculates about that in his new and good book called, "Nader and the Power of Everyman" (Grosset & Dunlap, New York, $10). Gorey imagines Nader coming back to his furnished room after having conducted the most gloriously imaginative campaign in 80 years. He has said that, if elected, he will do things like make the bureaucrats in the Department of Agriculture go to work on a farm a couple of months every year. While infusing his campaign with a string of such ideas he has also said how he intends to lead the country towards a humane and non-destructive private enterprise and peacetime living. Now the campaign is over and Gorey has a reporter ask Nader if he thinks he is going to win. Nader answers, "Certainly. I said we can't lose and we can't, because even if we don't get the most votes, we have won by setting up a true countervailing force against the winner."

William Jennings Bryan made that happen once. The Great Commoner ran for the Presidency three times and lost three times, but when he was finished he had changed America. That's the role for Ralph Nader, a Presidential man.

But, if it is not to be, there is still hope. As Brother Theodore would doubtless put it, we do enjoy a one hundred per cent mortality rate.

Outrage, resignation greet congressional pay raises

By United Press International
"It's a racket. The upper-crust can always afford to get what they want," commented Mississippi unemployment official Jane Metts, in an angry blast at Congress for voting itself a pay hike.

"There are plenty of people who need it more," said the 23-year-old Miss Metts. "Believe me, I speak from experience."

Other American taxpayers Thursday viewed the pay raise, which includes Vice President Nelson Rockefeller, cabinet members, the Supreme Court—and even Richard Nixon—with every emotion from rage to quiet acceptance.

"I think it's lousy," said Salt Lake City police Sgt. M.W. Olson. "Good God—they make more than they ought to now. The vice president makes all that money, for what? Sitting there holding a gavel in the Senate?"

Said unemployed offset printer Delmont Schumann, 51, of Minneapolis: "I'm opposed to the whole thing. Why should they get more money while I'm walking the streets? And Nelson Rockefeller has so much money he doesn't need anything."

However, St. Louis Postman William Buelt, commented, "I'm for it. I think the cost of living (raise) is needed; and since their salaries have been frozen since 1969, it's time for a raise."

Rockefeller, who currently makes $62,500 a year, would get a $5,375 raise. Members of Congress, making $42,500, would get a $3,655 raise.

In Dallas, Health, Education and Welfare program analyst Bruce Carter, 24, said regarding his own raise, "We loved it. But I don't think the high government officials deserved it."

New Orleans security guard Gene Bene said, "I don't see nothing wrong with it—they should get it too, like everyone else is. They got to live, too."

Herbert Passin, chairman of Columbia University's Sociology Department, said he didn't think the raises were unfair.

"I think those jobs are all underpaid anyway," he said. "I think other people should get raises too, but it doesn't bother me that they get it. I have always considered that the highest positions in government are underpaid in relation to corporate officers—it leads to the kind of petty corruption that we sometimes see in high places."

In New Jersey, Al Wurf, an official of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, said: "I think it is totally deplorable, especially in this state with a 12 per cent unemployment rate."

People here are literally in bread lines and the fat politicians are greedily taking money off the backs of workers."

Hal Houston, 26, a Sears Roebuck employee in Memphis, Tenn., commented, "It's a little steep, really, to me."

Scott's daughter out on bail

DOYLESTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — Mrs. Marian Concannon, 41, daughter of Senate Minority Leader Hugh Scott, R-Pa., was back at her job Thursday, driving a newspaper delivery truck, following her arrest in a series of drug raids.

Mrs. Concannon, a divorcee whose eight children live with their father, was accused of selling one ounce of hashish for $100 on Feb. 25 to an undercover agent for the Drug Law Enforcement Division of the state Department of Justice.

She was charged with sale and possession of hashish and released on $1,000 bail by District Justice Oliver A. Groman pending a hearing next Wednesday.

Bond was posted by Bayard Amelia, of Philadelphia, described as a long-time aide of the senator. Scott's only comment has been that, "I'll stand behind my daughter."

Mrs. Concannon works 18 hours a week as a truck driver for the Doylestown Daily Intelligencer and made her normal deliveries Thursday to stands and dropoffs for newsboys and motor route carriers.

Mrs. Concannon, whose nickname is "Scotty," lives in a brown-shingled cottage which overlooks the Delaware River in the Bucks County community of Point Pleasant.

Witnesses may be offered immunity

Hearst probes issue subpoenas

HARRISBURG, Pa. (UPI) — Federal prosecutors may offer radical sports figure Jack Scott and his wife, Micki, immunity to testify before a federal grand jury here about fugitive newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst.

Subpoenas were issued by Assistant U.S. Attorney Laurence Kelly in Scranton, Pa., it was learned Thursday. Mrs. Scott is to appear next Thursday and her husband on Sept. 4.

Prosecutors have been trying to get the Scotts before the grand jury since last April, but abandoned attempts when the couple said they would refuse to testify.

The current whereabouts of the Scotts is not known. However, they stayed for a time with basketball star Bill Walton at his home in Portland, Ore. They confirmed they received the subpoenas in an interview with the Portland Oregonian.

Reliable federal sources said the prosecutors are considering offering immunity to either Scott or his wife if they refuse to testify on constitutional grounds.

That would mean they could face a jail sentence if they refuse to tell the grand jury what they know about the Hearst case.

Scott is the former athletic director at Oberlin College in Ohio.

He rented a northeastern Pennsylvania farmhouse last year where the FBI believes Miss Hearst and William and Emily Harris, Symbionese Liberation Army members, were hiding.

The Oregonian reported that Scott and his wife would make the trip to Pennsylvania at government expense, but said they would "not be collaborators in the grand jury investigation."

"If I had any knowledge of the whereabouts of Patricia Hearst I certainly would not give it to any police agency in this country," Jack Scott told the Oregonian.

Meanwhile, the FBI is investigating a reported sighting of Hearst and William Harris in western Pennsylvania. They are testing a bag of garbage left in a post office in Shippingport northwest of Pittsburgh, hoping to find fingerprints.

Federal investigators have been engaged in a frustrating search for evidence about the alleged harboring of Miss Hearst and the Harrises since last February.

The only other witness to testify before the Harrisburg grand jury was Jay Weiner, 20, of Philadelphia.

That would mean they could face a jail sentence if they refuse to tell the grand jury what they know about the Hearst case.

Scott is the former athletic director at Oberlin College in Ohio.

eration Army members, were hiding.

Pennsy manages to lose $242 million

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The Penn Central Railroad Thursday reported a net loss for the first half of this year of $242.2 million, an increase of $138.6 million over the same period last year.

A report by the trustees of the bankrupt line said the figures did not include almost $143 million in grants and other funds received from the federal government.

"We believe that these amounts should be offset in order to understand the actual financial results and rationale of operations during the first half of 1975," the trustees said.

The report said the increased deficit was "caused primarily by the twin impact of inflated costs and the business recession which could not be recovered from higher freight rates and operating economies."

It said this was reflected in the reported net railway operating loss of $189.6 million, an increase of $135.4 million over the first six months of 1974.

The trustees said wages were up $49.0 million due to higher wage rates, material and fuel costs rose $40.3 million and utilities, casualty costs, equipment rentals and other items increased another $49.1 million.

Freight revenues for the first half year declined $42.5 million to $911 million, despite a 13.6 per cent higher level of freight rates which yielded $107 million in additional revenue.

Carloadings were off 16.8 per cent, causing a reduction of $149.7 million in revenues.

Nationwide suspension urged on school busing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. William V. Roth, Jr., R-Del., introduced Thursday a Senate resolution calling for a nationwide temporary halt in school busing pending a bi-partisan national commission report on busing.

Roth also introduced a bill to establish the national commission, to be made up of 15 persons appointed by President Ford and granted subpoena power. Roth said the commission should present its findings to the President and the Congress by March 1.

The commission "would help clarify the educational and legal issues surrounding the busing of students and assist in the search for viable alternatives for achieving quality education for all our children," Roth said.

Roth called for a moratorium on busing until after completion of the proposed report, saying the courts and some federal agencies have "for too long a time been making policy on the basis of their guesses about education considerations and social theories."

Gallup poll

Crime hits 1 in 4 homes

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third and final part of a three-part series on crime in America.

By GEORGE GALLUP

PRINCETON, N.J. — One household in every four in the United States has been hit by crime at least once during the last 12 months, with either property stolen or a member of the household a victim of an assault or mugging.

The picture is still more shocking in the case of households in the nation's largest cities (500,000 and over) where one household in three has been struck in the last year.

Crime statistics based on police reports paint a grim picture of growing crime in this country. Yet, if anything, the situation is worse than that reflected in these statistics, since, as the current survey indicates, almost four in 10 incidents were not reported to the police.

The survey results reported today indicate that non-whites and lower income persons are somewhat more likely to have been victimized, particularly in the case of crimes against persons, than whites and upper income groups.

The following table show the percentages of households struck by the various types of crime, with the 1972 figures for comparison.

The following questions were asked in the survey:

"During the last 12 months, have any of these (list of crimes handed to respondent) happened to you?" "Did you happen to report this to the police, or not?"

PER CENT OF HOUSEHOLDS HIT BY VARIOUS TYPES OF CRIME DURING LAST 12 MONTHS

HOUSEHOLDS:	1972 per cent	TODAY per cent
Home broken into, or at- tempt made	7	8
Money or property stolen	8	11
Property vandalized	8	10
Car stolen	2	2
PERSONS:
Assaulted or mugged; money or property taken from person by force or threat of force	2	2

As the table below indicates, a large percentage of crimes are not reported to the police:

HOUSEHOLDS:	All Incidents per cent	Reported Incidents per cent
Home broken into, or at- tempt made	8	5
Money or property stolen	11	7
Property vandalized	10	7
Car stolen	2	2
PERSONS:
Assaulted or mugged; money or property taken from person by force or threat of force	2	2

Today's report is the third and final report in a three-part series on crime in America. Here are highlights from the series:

— Crime is viewed as the top problem facing cities in the view of persons living in urban areas. Worry over crime even overshadows concern over economic problems. A generation ago, many problems were named ahead of crime by city inhabitants as their city's number one problem.

— The weight of opinion among all major population groups is that the crime situation has worsened during the last 12 months.

— Fear of crime continues to grow, with a record 45 per cent afraid to walk in their neighborhoods after dark and 19 per cent fearful even within their homes.

— One household in four has been hit by crime (personal or property) at least once during the last year. The ratio is one in three among households in the nation's largest cities.

— If anything, the bleak picture painted by crime statistics based on police reports is actually worse, since, as the survey determined, nearly four in 10 incidents were not reported to the police.

The results reported today are based on in-person interviews with 1,558 adults, 18 and older, interviewed in person in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period June 27-30.

Many causes for 'dizziness'

Whenever I make a sudden move, or when I put my head way back, I get a quick flash of dizziness. It disappears immediately. How can I find out what this means?

Mrs. B.L., N.C.

Dear Mrs. L.:

A patient's description of dizziness very often is confused with a sense of faintness, a headache or almost any other feeling in the head.

Actual dizziness should refer only to a feeling in which a person is standing still and objects rotate about him or her.

Sometimes, the reverse is true. Objects stand still and the patient has a feeling that he or she is rotating or tumbling. A self-made diagnosis for dizziness is not always disorder of the inner ear. This, indeed, does occur occasionally, but far less frequently than is commonly suspected.

When the hearing is good, other reasons should be sought. Low blood pressure, for example, is a common reason for a complaint such as yours.

When doctors ask their patients what their eating habits are, long periods of fasting may be uncovered. The result is that a combination of low, or relatively low, blood pressure, coupled with inadequate food, especially protein intake, may be responsible for the "flash" of faintness rather than true dizziness.

A complete ear examination is essential. Perhaps more important is to find out if there is any circulatory problem or neurological problem that produces this symptom.

I must emphasize that the simple causes of true dizziness far outweigh the serious ones.

Coal won't replace oil soon

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Coal, considered a corner stone of national fuel policy to attain energy self-sufficiency within a decade, has a long way to go to replace the dominance of oil in American industry.

Most economists agree coal has the potential to meet the energy needs of the United States. Yet there are no encouraging signs that the Ford administration's proposed doubling of domestic coal production by 1985 will be achieved.

United Mine Workers President Arnold Miller recently testified before the Senate Public Works Committee that in order to double the current coal output to 1.2 billion tons a year, the industry would have to hire an estimated 55,000 new miners.

And a study released by the Appalachian Regional Commission this month said the projected production levels could be hindered by lagging transportation systems, restrictions on the development of coal conversion plants and a lack of effective regional and state energy conservation plans.

Industry officials also cite a shortage of capital needed for investment in new mines or expansion of existing ones and blame wildcat strikes for their inability to boost production in the immediate future.

They say trained miners are just not available in large numbers to satisfy the growing demand for coal.

Ann Landers

Welcomes visitors

Dear Ann Landers: From time to time you have expressed the personal opinion that it is impolite and inconsiderate for people to drop in uninvited.

Please let me take this opportunity to tell all my friends that they have a standing invitation to my home anytime — day or night. If it happens to be mealtime, I can always throw on another hamburger or two and add some water to the soup. I consider an unexpected visit a compliment. And believe it or not, I'm not a lonesome old lady. I'm a 23-year-old male.

My friends also know they can borrow anything I have. It's theirs for the asking. I have yet to run into anyone who took advantage of me. If a friend gets into a jam and needs money, he (or she) knows that I would be more than happy to help out. They can pay me back whenever it is convenient. Maybe it will take a year or more — small amounts at a time. But I never turn down a friend and I've never been stuck.

What is life all about if a person can't extend a helping hand and keep his door and his heart open to those in need? Please sign me —

Walk On In And Sit Right Down

Dear Mr. Great Heart: That was some letter. How come you didn't sign your name? How will people know WHERE to walk on in and sit right down? And at any hour of the day or night, yet.

You're a money lender, too? And you've never been stuck? Well, may it be ever thus, pal. I am not criticizing your philosophy. It's beautiful. But I am not even going to tell anyone what state you live in.

Dear Ann Landers: Why can't people keep their big mouths shut? Our adopted daughter (age 11) came home crying yesterday. It seems our next-door neighbor told our little girl that she was adopted. I had not planned on telling Jill for another four or five years.

Now the child won't eat. She is moody — says we lied to her and now she wants to find her "real" mommy and daddy. We are heartsick — and all because this big-mouth neighbor opened her yap. Please print this letter for all who feel the need to involve themselves in other people's business. —

Dear S.L.P.: Put the blame where it belongs — on yourself and your husband. Adopted children should be told that they were "chosen" as soon as they are able to understand what the word means. Had you done so, no big-mouth neighbor would have created this mess.

WARMUP: (Q.) (Comment) May I share my remedy with "Seven Frost-Bitten Months," the girl whose boy friend treats her coldly?

I have gone out with a dozen guys, and two out of three of them used to be like her boy friend. I said used to be because I changed them.

If a boy and I were walking down the street and I liked him, I'd put my hand in his, or put my arm through his arm, or hold him, or stop him and kiss him. At first he would be surprised, but after a while he got used to it, and held my hand or kissed me of his own accord. It was good clean fun, but boy what fun.

My mom told me how to go about it. She was smart, and so was I for taking her advice. —

EAST STROUDSBURG — Exhibitors at the 31st Pocono Mountains Antique Show have been announced and will include a wide variety of antiques for buyers and browsers.

The antique show, which will benefit the General Hospital of Monroe County, will be held from Wednesday through Friday at the East Stroudsburg High School gymnasium.

Local exhibitors include Frank and Caroline Kerr of Minisink Hills, Mabel and Martin Schneider of Buck Hill Falls, Frank O. Smith of East Stroudsburg and Dorothy Rosbach of Dingmans Ferry.

Specialties will include country and 18th century furniture by Mrs. Helen Correll of Hamburg and the Silver Sleigh of Tunkhannock, oriental artifacts by Roseann Zanowsky, Henryville, memorabilia from the Stroudsburgs by Robert Godshall and primitives by Pauline Williams of The Whales.

Art glass, china, antique jewelry, prints and dolls will all be on exhibit.

Hours for the show will be 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday and 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday. An international cafe will serve varied menus in the high school cafeteria.

Admission to the show is $1.50; discount tickets for a quarter off are available at area stores.

Saint Laurent drops waist

PARIS (UPI) — The waistline dropped with a gentle thud at Yves Saint Laurent's winter high fashion show Wednesday.

The narrow-as-a-stringbean look that swept the Paris collections this week was translated at Saint Laurent's Avenue Marceau salon into a two-piece dress: a box-pleated, swinging skirt and a loose top banded gently at mid-hip, a string tie neatly bowed under the schoolgirl collar.

Saint Laurent showed this low-waisted style in black-and-red argyle plaid and fuzzily printed wool voiles and silks in

A new book may help you and me save a lot of money and avoid the likes of Daniel.

Daniel is a hairdresser who teeters on platform shoes and pronounces his name "Don-yell." I complained when he recently cut my curly hair in an ill-suited style. "Your hairdresser knows best," he chided and charged me $15.

At least I got out without tipping him, or the shampoo lady, or a roughed waif with a curling iron. Because I wouldn't spend most of hours in rollers, my poorly cut hair frizzed into a mop shaped like the Egyptian headresses painted on pyramid walls. My own mother said I looked like a small-town Texas waitress she'd seen after the woman got a free haircut at a hospital beauty shop.

No more. With the aid of a $4.95 manual, I've learned how to do it myself. In fact, my last $15 haircut is one of the styles described in "how to cut your own or anybody else's hair."

by New York City hairdresser Bob Bent. The book is stocked in Stroudsburg and is selling moderately well, sellers say.

Bent 33, is a nice looking fellow with freckles, a friendly smile, and ordinary shoes. It's still easy to envision him back in a Davidson College dorm in North Carolina, selling haircuts at 50 cents to earn enough money to get to Fort Lauderdale. But his blond hair is outstanding, the sort you'd notice in a crowd. He started cutting it himself, he says, long before he became a hairdresser some five years ago.

"I'm not trying to run hairdressers out of business," he says, explaining there will always be people who want professional hairstyles for vanity or other reasons.

But the rest of us, he contends, have been victimized by the "hair revolution" of recent years. "The public is being duped by fancy salons with fancy prices and lousy haircuts," he says. "Hairdressers are unable to see the simplicity of what they're doing. They're constantly trying to create some style, thinking of themselves as artists when really it's a great craft and nothing more."

Men suffer along with women, says Bent. He contends plenty of barbers simply began calling themselves stylists, raised their prices, and started cutting long hair that they really didn't know how to handle.

Bent's book has a few basic cuts that can be worn by men or women. There's short cut, a layered cut, and an all-one-length version for longer hair. Bent says they're equally suitable for black and white, for those who want the natural look, or for women who prefer traditional sets. Variations are printed in a special section on children's hair. The straightforward text is accompanied by numerous drawings to help even a novice figure out what to do. There is even a section on how to properly blow dry hair.

In the book and in person, Bent is emphatic about using "the right equipment." Scissors only, for example, no razors. And the scissors have to be plain little shears no longer than 6 inches. For easy handling, he prefers a pair about 4 1/2 inches long.

You'll also need a standard barber comb, two mirrors for do-it-yourselfers, and some large hair clips to hold hair out of the way. (I made do with bobby pins). To avoid sloppy snipping, Bent recommends that hair be clean and wet. Don't use a lot of hair rinse; it makes strands slippery. For unencumbered movement, he suggests taking off your clothes if you're doing your own. And don't forget to scatter around some newspapers or plastic sheets to catch the clippings.

Presumably, cutting somebody's else's hair would be easier than doing your own.

"Cutting each other's hair is a really nice thing for couples to do," says Bent. And he contends families with children can save both money and an occasional trauma. "A lot of men, can remember growing up and being very scared of barbers. They'd use these electric things and cut all your hair off. It was awful. Wouldn't it be much nicer if the child's mother or father could cut it?" he suggests.

Play is for kids, not adults

NEW YORK (UPI) — Eric McMillan considers a playground comparable to a cake.

"The appetite of the child varies," said the British-born McMillan. "One day he wants a big piece of cake, next day maybe only a cookie."

The analogy is that a child's interests and needs are wide range and that he should be given "the dignity of selection." A child wants to affect his environment.

McMillan, owner of a firm in Toronto, is a playground specialist who feels that most play areas are built by adults who have forgotten what it's like to be a child.

Almost everything is built to four priorities, he said. They are, in order, economy, ease of maintenance, safety and finally the child's pleasure.

The child is expected to "give"—to adapt to the play area. It should be the other way around. "We as adults all are the results of our childhood, how we affect the environment, how it affects us," he said.

"Planning briefs seem more like graveyards, not living things. It's like putting a child in a concrete box instead of allowing him to explore an Aladdin's cave."

McMillan, in an interview, deplored the limitations of most playgrounds. A child can go up and down on a slide, back and forth in a swing, and that's about it. Then boredom sets in, and sometimes destruction with it.

"I don't think swings and slides are wrong," he said. "What amazes me is that most planning is a modern version of what we've always done. In some research recently, I went through an 1897 catalogue. A lot of what was shown was what we see today."

"Yet our urban needs have changed drastically. Technology has advanced dramatically. We are good at making work, but not good at making play."

McMillan trained at the Salford School of Art and Industrial Design, about 25 miles from Liverpool. He planned exhibits in the United Kingdom and Europe until he came to Montreal to work on Expo '67.

Then, a privately-financed $34 million recreation center in Toronto asked him to design a play area. Seven months and $700,000 later, Ontario Children's Village was completed.

ABOUT AN EPICUREAN SAFARI... Dining at "Selecta," 6 miles south of Stroudsburg, is like going to a private party abroad. The yellow sign on Rt. 191 reads only: "SELECTA (215) 588-1042 Rijstafel." Garden patch: Millipedes

By JOHN E. WITHROW
Monroe County
Agricultural Agent

Millipedes are those "creepy" creatures that people hate to have in the house. Although not an insect, these pests are often wrongly called wireworms.

Millipedes are classified as Diplopoda. They eat the roots of various plants, tunnel into roots and tubers, eat planted seeds, devour leaves, and bore into fruits that lie in contact with the ground. However, the main food of these creatures is decaying vegetable matter and manure.

While the millipedes are in the soil "doing their thing," they are more beneficial than harmful. It is when they start to invade the porch, car port, and indoor areas that people notice their presence. Fortunately, they are harmless to humans, pets and indoor furnishings. They cannot survive for any extended period indoors.

Millipedes live in cool, damp places such as those found under leaf mold, loose bark, compost heaps, piles of grass clippings, sawdust piles, buried wood, brick and stone pathways, in the hollow of trees, and similar places.

At certain times in the year millipedes become restless and migrate from their normal living places outdoors into houses and other shelters. Our excessive rainfall recently has helped to urge them on. They begin to appear on the porch, in the basement, and in the house. Their numbers will range from one or two to hundreds.

Where the numbers are few, they simply can be swept off the porch or out of the house or picked up with the vacuum cleaner. Where they are more numerous, they can be killed with aerosol ant and roach sprays. If the infestation is persistent, it may be necessary to find their source. Their breeding and nesting places will need to be removed or treated with garden insecticides.

When it is necessary to use insecticides to control the millipedes outdoors, spray with either four tablespoonfuls carbaryl (Sevin) 50 per cent wettable powder or three tablespoonfuls diazinon 25 per cent emulsion in two gallons of water per 100 square feet. Treat a band 10 to 15 feet wide around the foundation.

Thoroughly wet the ground before applying the spray so the millipedes will come to the surface. After applying the spray, sprinkle the ground to remove the insecticide.

The larger and the older millipedes become, the more difficult for the insecticides to be effective. Fortunately, there is only one generation each year.

Just Between Us —

By Bobby Westbrook

During the many years when my weekends centered around weddings for the social page, there were times when I didn't care whether I ever spelled phlebanopsis or chrysanthemum again. But after a year's recess and even a hiatus in family weddings, the arrival of a wedding invitation made me realize that I really was sort of homesick for them.

A family wedding is always a joyous time, not only for the wedding party but for the older generation who gets a chance to see how the other generations are progressing and to see them at their slicked-up best with suits and long dresses and the best behavior that goes with them.

Then, there's the chance to meet the extended family with whom the future, family fortunes are now entangled. In the case of Marie Conklin's marriage to Alan Price Young that extended family really spreads out.

For an impressive total add the Price clan to the Conklins, with five of the prettiest daughters you ever saw, two sons, grandmothers and all. Four of Marie's sisters were in the wedding party, and all of them had made their own gowns.

The setting was pretty too. In the Methodist Church in Effort the rough-hewn cross is in stark contrast to the sunny interior with gold drapes at the windows, open to the hum of bees in a perfect day with a sky so high it seemed to reach to infinity.

The sky was high the rest of the week, too, but it might just as well have been ceiling zero as far as my own plummeting spirits were concerned after I'd been called in to help cope with the family dislocation that followed a son-in-law being put in traction because of a slipped disc.

Now, I can understand the current epidemic of broken toes over the extended hot spell when people had trouble sleeping and got up to wander around in bare feet but no such simple explanation occurs about the apparent epidemic of slipped discs. And of course you always ask why now and why to mine!

Besides, against the background of personal worry, all the minor frustrations like cars that won't start, toilets that won't flush, vegetables that burn, scuffed knees, bumped heads, and missing sneakers seem like major catastrophes.

Add real sorrow like the death of two personal friends within a few days of each other and the depression deepens. Of course, I had a lot of company dismayed by the death of Dr. Robert Brown who was Mr. Education to generations of Stroudsburg High School students.

Actually, he was really known as "Gig" Brown to the irreverent but as he reminded one of the 50-year reunion classes there was one school crises — they did have them then, too — when he and one other teacher carried on the whole curriculum.

Just saying that 92 is a ripe old age doesn't mean that he still wasn't contributing, busy with collecting his research into many phases of local his-

Mines tourist traps

Dow Jones-Offaway News
Abandoned mines are like magnets for adventurous tourists and amateur prospectors. But the Mining Enforcement and Safety Administration recently warned such explorers to be wary of these potential death traps.

The only safe rule is to stay away from abandoned mine workings, thus avoiding such hazards as rotten timbers, contaminated air, cave-ins, deteriorated explosives, foul water, and poisonous snakes.

Those who have a legitimate right to enter closed mines and find it necessary to do so should consult the nearest sub-district or field office of the administration.

tory, which makes his passing a professional as well as a personal loss!

Well, I guess it's true that the best cure for depression is having to face up to responsibility. When I, perforce, served as the whole family cheering section at the inter-day-camp sports day, I didn't have time to worry about much else.

Since the games were going on simultaneously, I tried to watch the baseball game when Peter was pitching or at bat, and the volleyball game when it was Jennifer's turn to serve. Collecting in the process a whole covey of the younger campers whose grandmothers weren't there. Wonder if there's such a thing as a tennis-audience neck from swiveling the head back and forth?

A Castle In Our Dreams

There is a castle in our dreams where we take secrets and our most cherished hopes and ambitions. We may repair to it when the World of reality has misunderstood, has been cruel and unkind. Within the walls of this castle of ours, safe from prying eyes, we can map plans for the realization of our hopes and ambitions. To do this correctly we must have proper focus, proper directives and self disciplining. In other words our ambitions must be worthwhile, directed toward the right goal by a functioning conscience.

Here is where the Church comes in. It will point the way. It will furnish directives—rules and guides of faith. And it will help us discipline ourselves, if we attend regularly and call upon it for help and strength, to the end that we can always repair to our castle of dreams and live with ourselves.

ARIES (March 21 to April 20) — Some things which seemed at a standstill can now be picked up, brightened, advanced. Avoid extremes in thought and action, however.

TAURUS (April 21 to May 21) — Mixed planetary influences. Be careful not to speak out of turn, and don't press too forcibly for what you want when a few well-chosen words will do the trick.

GEMINI (May 22 to June 21) — You may encounter what seems to be undue opposition. Take whatever steps are necessary to overcome it, but do not mistake honest discussion for hostility.

CANCER (June 22 to July 23) — Anchor to a well-organized program. Do not expose yourself to needless precarious action, or make foolish compromises, to be later regretted. Head up!

LEO (July 24 to August 23) — You can make your personality felt in many areas now, but be sufficiently prepared in situations through which you hope to profit. Haste would be unwise.

VIRGO (August 24 to September 23) — Be prepared today for interruptions, necessary delays. Some order and specifics will be disrupted, perhaps not showing effects till later. Clear the atmosphere of tension.

LIBRA (September 24 to October 23) — You may not size up occupational situations as accurately as usual. Better double-check! On the personal side, romance and travel favored.

SCORPIO (October 24 to November 23) — Some ungovernable moments indicated, but you can handle with your native intelligence and astuteness. Just be sure to keep emotions under control.

SAGITTARIUS (November 23 to December 21) — A good day for attaining one of your cherished goals. Someone behind the scenes is working in your interests.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20) — A fine day for teamwork. Many useful ideas will result from an exchange of views with associates. Some good news indicated in the p.m.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19) — A down-to-earth attitude needed. Don't let yourself be drawn into a whirlwind of rumor and speculation — now rife in many quarters.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20) — Don't let surface glitter beguile you now. Search for facts before accepting any proposition — no matter how rosy it sounds.

YOU BORN TODAY are endowed with a lively mind, a dynamic personality, lofty ambitions and great dignity. You are capable of leadership in many fields, but must curb certain traits before you are able to take on such responsibilities, which require self-mastery and discipline. Don't let domineering, excessive pride or impatience cause you to be sharp with others. Leoties make outstanding executives once they have conquered these faults. Otherwise, their value is lessened because they lower the morale of associates and employees. You are ardent, romantically inclined, love to travel and enjoy the luxuries of life — which you are willing to work for.

3. ♠KQ8532 ♥AKJ73 ♦10 ♣6
4. ♠KJ964 ♥A8 ♦AJ5 ♣AQ7

1. Four diamonds. There is obviously a chance for a slam, and the best way of investigating it is by a four diamond bid. Partner presumably has 13 to 15 points and good trump support for his raise to three. However, points are not as important as suit controls opposite this 17-point hand. Partner could have any one of these hands for his three spade bid:

1. ♠KJ83 ♥AQ94 ♦72 ♣A65
2. ♠K8732 ♥AJ6 ♦Q9 ♣Q83
3. ♠K762 ♥Q974 ♦8 ♣AQ53

With the first two hands he would bid four hearts over four diamonds to show the ace, and you would go to six spades, which is an excellent contract. But with the third hand partner would merely bid four spades — because he could not properly bid five clubs to show the ace, holding a minimum three spade bid — and you would avoid reaching a poor slam.

Blackwood should be avoided when specific suit controls are an important factor. The cue-bid method is used instead.

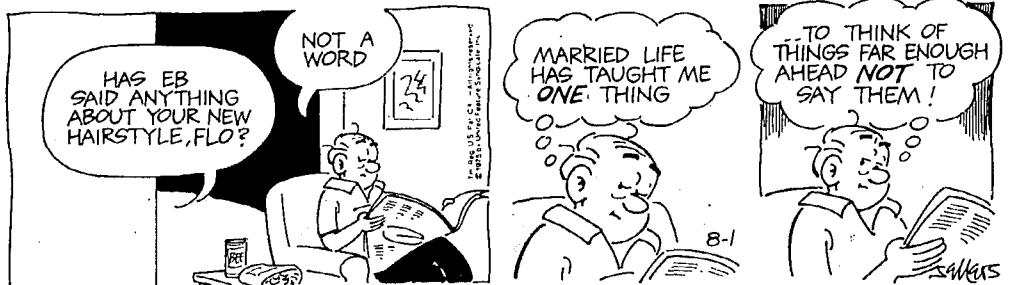

2. Four spades. Four hearts would be a slam try, just as four diamonds was in the previous case. Since you have a minimum opening bid a slam is out of the question, so you close the bidding with four spades. (Partner is known to have at least four trumps for his jump-raise).

3. Four notrump. Here you do use Blackwood because the number of aces partner has tells you how many tricks you can make. If he responds five spades (three aces), you go to seven spades; if he responds five hearts (two aces), you bid six spades; if he responds five diamonds (one ace), you stop at five spades.

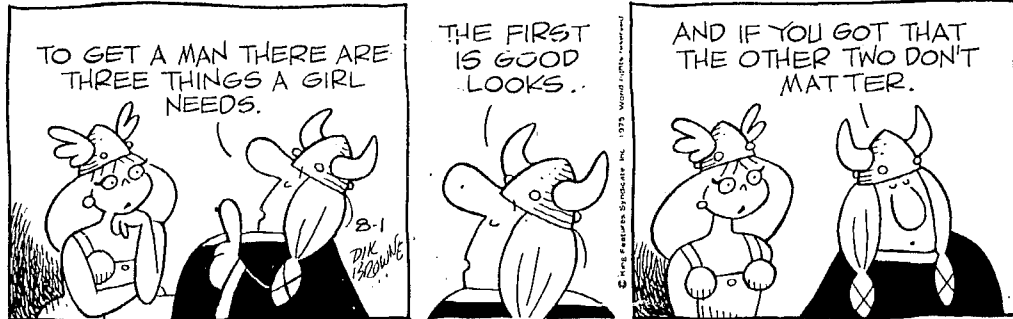

4. Six spades. Here you go directly to the slam without ceremony. The leap to six is highly likely to produce the best result. Considering that you have a balanced hand (no void or singleton), point count can be used to good advantage. The 19 high-card points, the guaranteed spade fit, and the first or second round control of all suits indicate a very good chance for the slam.

Voice of Broadway

By JACK O'BRIAN

NEW YORK — Show business being the unique field it is, the people behind the scenes are sometimes more of a story than those spotlighted on stage, screen or TV. Thousands of slides are flashed on-screen evenings at the authentically nostalgic Bill's Gay 90's, on E. 54th St., the one time speakeasy, now a respectable and exciting nightclub-restaurant operated by Obie (Othmar Blasius) Bart, Jersey banker, who — when the situation demands — cooks, bartends, hosts and produces the shows there.

But Obie isn't the story we're about to tell. Our tale is about Sal TerraCina, pianist-organist extraordinaire and the fellow who flashes the screen-slides on, on both floors, via slide projector. He accompanies his nightly down-memory-lane slides sessions at Bill's Gay 90's with songs in which he leads the audience in singing lyrics appropriate to the slides he shows.

Sal's led a charmed life and, although you may see the likenesses of headliners such as Douglas Fairbanks Sr., George Arliss, Mary Pickford, W.C. Fields, Gary Cooper, Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Al Smith, Jimmy Walker, Lloyd George, Mussolini, Hitler, F.D.R., Eleanor Roosevelt, Hope Hampton, Charles "Buddy" Rogers — yes, the list is endless — onscreen, Sal, day by day, is a vital and amazing character in his own right.

It was Sal at age 14 in the town of Elizabeth, N.J., on a normal night, who donned a devil's suit and climbed to the steeple of St. Anthony's Church, an event still remembered by local elders. The arriving crowds were amazed to see the devil himself scampering about the steeple. First the police, then the fire department were called. Flashlights, arc-lights, beacons were played on the prancing kid. "The devil's in him," said the people.

The local alarm was beyond belief and finally he was brought down and a family lambasting followed. The church was appealed to. The church had the devil in him, they said. So he was brought before the powers that were. It was decided after lengthy discussion with his family the devil must be exorcised. This was before the movies made that custom famous. TerraCina, a mere boy, was taken under the church's wing. His mentors supervised his every move and he started to respond so much they'd let him play the piano and the organ, at which time he memorized 50 operas he still plays.

The wise supervision and direction started to bear fruit. A born talent, Sal painted murals of the Holy Land on the church walls, his gesture of gratitude for the attention and love he received.

As months multiplied Sal became a mind-reader; and, in Chicago, at 17, he was billed as "the world's youngest mentalist." Many people still come today to have him do readings for them, his following having spread into many states. In 1933, Sal worked the Chicago World's Fair and started to create masques of an enormous size, sculpting and forming them himself, a chicken-wire base covered with plaster of Paris, beautifully painted and bespeaking the inborn art talent which seems ever available whenever his situation demands.

In the early 1950', while he was touring with Zorita, the dancer, Sal remembers almost giving up the art of entertaining entirely. It happened in Rutland, Vt. Zorita had danced with a boa constrictor and oft-times she threatened to throw the writhing beast at him. He took it as an idle threat. This time she made good and Sal, who says he recalls what happened the first time "a man, a woman and a serpent were involved," fled the act and left for good. So much panic resulted, the snake was never found.

As Sal projects excerpts from his library of 27,000 slides, there's one he knows will make an audience gasp and at the proper moment he flashes it onscreen.

"It's a newspaper front page of Jan. 14, 1928," says TerraCina, "and it shows murderess Ruth Snyder in the electric chair, a first for journalism. And it always amazes the nostalgic audiences."

Water heaters

Let me tell you something. I thought a long time before I decided to write this column. I mean, this country has enough on its mind what with the price of oil, the unemployment rate, and the scarcity of energy.

But . . . how do you say goodbye to an old hot water heater?

Answer: Very slowly. Maybe some of you have never had the problem of replacing your hot water heater. I hope it is something you never have to live through. If there's anything worse than not having a hot water heater, it's having two of them.

The list of people who do not want your old one would reach up to your elbow.

First, I approached the outfit who sold us the new one. They said there was no market for resale in an old hot water heater.

Then I called the service agencies who said they could find no therapeutic value in picking it up, let alone fixing it.

I called a junk dealer who said, "What is this, lady? An invitation to attend a hernia?" Then an incredible phenomenon took place. For 26 years, my husband and I have sustained our marriage on a 50-50 basis. All of a sudden, the broken hot water heater not only assumed a sex, but without benefit of a hearing, I assumed its custody . . . all 100 per cent of it.

"When are you going to get rid of her?" asked my husband.

"Her who?" "Her. The hot water heater." "If things keep going the way they've been going, we may have to put her in the spare bedroom."

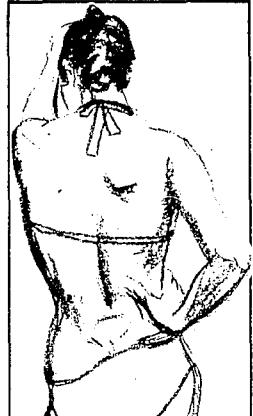

As the weeks wore on, I considered planting flowers in it, putting four wheels on it and driving it, slipcovering it, putting it on the porch, or putting it in my car, locking all the doors, and waiting for someone to steal it.

Today, it stands in the garage . . . a monument to man's over-enthusiasm for technology.

Can't you see life from another planet in the year 2001, finding an entire earth littered with the remains of billions of hot water heaters and reporting, "They were a tall race with a 30-40 gallon capacity and very little expression."

"Did you bring one back so we could study it?" asks his leader.

"Hey, man . . . that's not my job!"

Bridge narrows

MILFORD — The Pennsylvania Department of Transportation is closing one lane on the bridge over the Sawkill Bridge on U.S. Rte. 209 to traffic going south from Milford Borough effective July 30.

The lane will remain closed for approximately four weeks so repairs can be made.

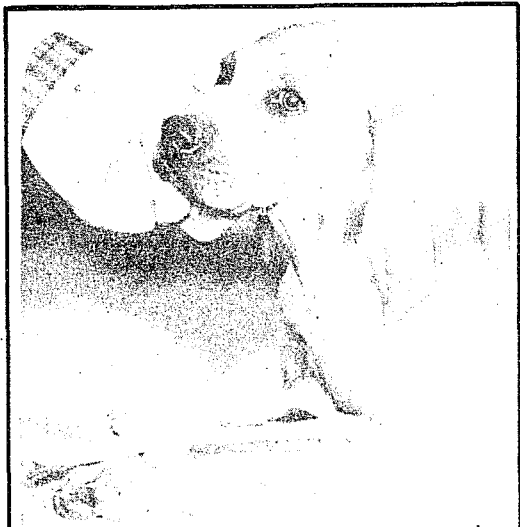

A temporary traffic signal has been erected and will be used to alternate traffic flow over the bridge until the required repairs have been completed.

Motorists are advised to expect delays.

Additional information may be obtained from D.F. Wiltshire, district traffic engineer, at 717-961-4041.

W-Gap concerts on tap

MILLBROOK — Mary Beth Armes, a lyric soprano, will be featured in "Hark! The Echoing Air" at the Water Gap Concerts at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 2 along with trumpeter David Jackson, who will share the program with her.

The featured work on the program is Bach's Cantata 151, "Jauchzet Gott in allen Landen" which was written for soprano, trumpet and strings.

Other pieces include various combinations with voice and trumpet, violin, oboe, harpsichord and cello from works of Purcell, Lully, Rameau, Campra, Torelli and Telemann.

Miss Armes, professor of singing at Centenary College in Shreveport, La. and Jackson, professor of brass instruments at Union College in Kentucky, will be assisted by an oboist, cellist and violinist.

Virginia Brewer, who is artist-in-residence at the Water Gap Concerts this summer, is being featured in a concert of oboe and string music at Watergate at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 9.

It will be the sixth in a series of weekly concerts presented by Artists for Environmental Foundation in affiliation with the National Park Service at the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area. The free performances are held outdoors.

Miss Brewer, who has been with the Water Gap Concerts for three seasons now, has chosen a program of "oboe quartets" which is not a collection of four oboists, but rather a group of four musicians where the oboe is featured and is joined by the violin, viola and cello.

She will be presenting quartets by Mozart, Gatti and Britten.

The Watergate is 12 miles north of I-80 on the New Jersey side of the Delaware River, just south of Millbrook. In the event of rain, concerts are held in the Millbrook Church.

Emergency services needs input

ALLENTOWN — The Technical Advisory Committee (TAC) of the Eastern Pennsylvania Comprehensive Health Planning Board is accepting local comments for a proposed emergency medical services system.

TAC received a $45,000 federal grant to prepare a plan to coordinate emergency services for Monroe, Berks, Carbon, Lehigh, Northampton and Schuylkill counties.

"The committee's objective is to develop an effective emergency medical services system for the entire region. We are hopeful that continued support from local government and active consumer input will help us to reach our goals," said executive director Peter Whitler.

The 32-member committee is composed of ambulance personnel, physicians, nurses, hospital administrators and police.

TAC conducted a survey to categorize emergency rooms and the type of care they can offer so that ambulance drivers can take a patient to a hospital that has a special unit for his injury.

The plans also include a communications system between hospitals, ambulances and other medically-related services.

TAC is also examining existing training programs to see how effective they are and if new programs are needed.

DelVal teacher dismissed

MATAMORAS — One teacher was dismissed and another issued a warning letter during a special meeting of the Delaware Valley School Board Thursday.

Benjamin Lucciola, fifth grade teacher in the middle school was dismissed "based on testimony presented at a hearing on July 22 showing a persistent violation of the school laws of Pennsylvania."

Voting for the dismissal were President Eugene Garvey, Treasurer Thomas Hogan, Vice President Michael Palmer and Directors Kenneth Ryder, Patricia Phillips and Walter R. Shannon.

Secretary Hazel Irvine abstained from voting, stating she had not attended the July 22 hearing.

Dismissal of a teacher requires a two-thirds vote of the nine-member board.

Dismissal action against Sandra Bumgarner, a Matamoras Elementary School teacher was terminated. The board voted to send a letter to her explaining that two unsatisfactory ratings are necessary to discharge a teacher under tenure, warning her in regard to future actions and expressing hope for improvement in her work.

Garvey directed the district solicitor to take any legal action necessary in relation to the dismissal of Lucciola.

Police blotter

Cyclist hurt

POCONO FARMS — A Tobyhanna youth was slightly injured Thursday when he was thrown from a motorcycle in the Pocono Farms development, three miles north of Mount Pocono.

State Police at Swiftwater said Paul Leonard, 15, of Hemlock Drive, Tobyhanna was riding a motorcycle down a dirt and gravel road in the development, hit a rock and was thrown from the cycle at 3:15 p.m.

Leonard was admitted to the General Hospital of Monroe County in satisfactory condition with multiple abrasions and a broken wrist.

Police said the 1975 Yamaha motorcycle sustained $400 in damages.

Theft charged

DELAWARE WATER GAP — A Philadelphia man was arrested Thursday by State Police at Swiftwater and charged with stealing gasoline from another man's car.

According to police, Fred Fedorko, 29, of Edinboro has accused Joseph McHale, 19, of Philadelphia of stealing gasoline from his car. The incident happened at 1:15 a.m. at the Mount Mini Apartments, Delaware Water Gap.

McHale was committed to Monroe County Jail in lieu of $2,500 bail.

Girl lost

Eagles give $100 check to library

STROUDSBURG — Senior citizens received a boost with the donation of a $100 check to the Monroe County Public Library to buy large-print books and magazines.

The check was presented by the Fraternal Order of Eagles Auxiliary 1106.

According to Carol Deane, librarian, the money will be used to cover magazine subscriptions to Aging, Retirement and large-print edition of Reader's Digest.

The donation was duplicated throughout the United States and Canada through funds which were made available to the auxiliaries by the Eagles Memorial Foundation.

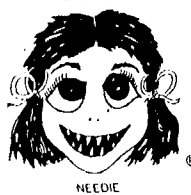

Libraries were chosen as recipients of the grants because of the helpful service they offer to senior citizens.

DER chief bemoans dam loss

By STEVE DRACHLER
Pocono Record Reporter
NEWARK, N.J. — Dr. Maurice K. Goddard knew it was over before it started Thursday.

Goddard, secretary of Pennsylvania's Department of Environmental Resources (DER), admitted before the Delaware River Basin Commission meeting the Tocks Island Dam proposal was in deep, deep trouble.

It was. Less than three hours later New Jersey Gov. Brendan T. Byrne made the fatal announcement. The commission had voted 3-1, with one member abstaining, to recommend Congress de-authorize the $400 million project.

Standing alone in supporting the controversial project was Goddard's boss — Pennsylvania Gov. Milton J. Shapp.

"They don't know what they are getting into," Goddard said before the meeting.

"What is the Delaware River Valley going to do for water in 25 years? Tocks Island is the only answer I know."

Goddard has been one of the outspoken advocates of a dam across the Delaware River for many years.

Land purchase continues

NEWARK, N.J. — With Pennsylvania's vote noticeably absent, the Delaware River Basin Commission (DRBC) voted Thursday to urge the continued acquisition of land for the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area (DWGNRA).

No explanation was given for Pennsylvania's abstention from the second vote of the special commission meeting at a Newark, N.J. hotel.

New Jersey, New York and the federal Department of the Interior voted to ask Congress to finish buying land for the 72,000 acre DWGNRA. Delaware joined Pennsylvania in abstaining from the vote.

The vote came at the same time governors from the four states and an Interior Department representative were considering their recommendation for the future of the Tocks Island Dam proposal.

New Jersey Gov. Brendan T. Byrne, acting as a spokesman for the five-member commission, said the recreation area is viable without the dam and 37 mile-long lake along the Delaware River from near Shawnee-on-Delaware to Port Jervis, N.Y.

"The land could serve as a land bank for the federal government. That way, if, at a future date it was seen Tocks would have to be built, the land would be readily available," Byrne said.

"We need the flood control, the water supply. Now we have to start all over again," he said.

Goddard, who has heard it all about Tocks Island, after sitting in on hundreds of hours of meetings and hearings, shrugged his shoulders and walked away.

Later, after the press conference where the governors announced their decision, anti-dam groups were ecstatic and lined the hallways, talking under bright lights to television reporters and congratulating each other.

"I'm very happy with what came out today," said Mina Haele, president of the Delaware Valley Conservation Assn., one of the most vigorous groups opposing construction of the dam.

"But our fight is not over yet. We have to take our case to Congress now and make sure nothing happens in Washington to upset things."

"I won't be really happy until the vote is taken in Congress and I see the project has been de-authorized."

Mrs. Haele and about a dozen supporters brought a petition with them to the meeting, hoping to present it to Gov. Byrne.

After the press conference broke up, the hand-wound roll of paper was presented to Byrne. She said it contained about 12,000 signatures.

Spokesmen from other groups, the Sierra Club and the League for Conservation Education, voiced their pleasure at the decision following the meeting.

'They shouldn't take people's homes'

Former Tocks residents react

By JEFF WIDMER
Pocono Record Reporter

EAST STROUDSBURG — Whether they fought for or against construction of the Tocks Island Dam, people whose homes were taken for a project agree they were wronged.

"Well, I feel it (the dam) should have gone in. After all, they took our house," commented Mrs. Frank B. Kober Sr. of East Stroudsburg R.D. 3, whose home three miles from Shawnee-on-Delaware was bought a few years ago.

"I think it's ridiculous, spending all that money and routing people out of the homes. And for what? There's nothing but wilderness there right now," she said, referring to the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area along River Road.

"I still feel they shouldn't take people's homes and not put in the dam. Why should people have to give up their homes so city people can come live on the land?"

Henry Tucker of Stroudsburg R.D. 5 lost a home and 110 acres of land to a dam that may never be built.

"That was where I wanted to spend the rest of my life," he said. "It's a shame, because the whole valley — now it's nothing but weeds and rubbish."

"I didn't get what I should have for the house and land."

"I believe later on there will be a dam," he continued. "I suppose that's progress. You have to forget about it."

Tucker said he misses the people who lived there, the community that existed in Hialeah Park and the deer he used to feed near the river.

Others try to forget the homes the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers took from them.

"What are you going to do?" Mrs. Benedict Pastorini mentally shrugged. "You can't fight city hall," said the Shawnee resident.

Losing her home was "a very rough feeling. We all enjoyed being down there. It was a beautiful area."

One former resident of Hialeah Park, who did not want to be identified, explained his feelings this way:

"I have no particular feeling about it one way or the other. If I look back, I get ulcers. If I look forward, I have pleasure."

Dam vote won't alter sewerage

EAST STROUDSBURG — The absence of the Tocks Island Dam won't change plans for a $7 million sewerage system for eastern Monroe County since the dam was never included in the projections to begin with.

James E. Cadue Jr., director of the Monroe County General Authority, said the size of the sewage treatment plant proposed won't be changed because of the dam not being built.

"Most of the studies adressed to possibility of a dam but as far as our project goes, it shouldn't affect us."

Cadue said the dam was excluded from projections by planning engineers "because even if it was approved, it would be 10 years before it is built."

Cadue said projections were based on permanent population and not transients. "Any impact would be in hotels and motels and restaurants but we will have some reserve capacity for peak daily and seasonal flows."

The Tocks Island Dam would have increased greatly the garbage from the area and Cadue said he still expects it to increase somewhat from the recreation area. He said the county is investigating participating in a resource recovery system in either New Jersey or Northampton County because it is currently not feasible for the county to operate one of its own since it doesn't have enough garbage.

John Zukowski, Smithfield supervisor, said sewerage plans for that township won't be changed in light of the DRBC decision because "we weren't counting on anything."

Cliff Hauser, chairman of the Delaware Water Gap Planning Commission said he's glad a decision was made against the dam.

"That was one of the complaints. The sewerage system wouldn't have been adequate if the dam went through. We didn't know how much to plan for but now we can plan more accurately. It will increase but not by so much," Hauser said.

The Pocono Record Where were you when Tocks fell?

By FLIP DeLUCA

STROUDSBURG — Reaction from local civic leaders was mixed although a majority of those contacted cheered the Delaware River Basin Commission's (DRBC) vote to recommend the Tocks Island Dam not be constructed.

"Those governors (Carey of New York, Byrne of New Jersey and Tribbett of Delaware) have more sense than Shapp for voting it down," said Charles Merring, mayor of East Stroudsburg.

"I've always felt ... it wasn't all that necessary for water supply downstream. If it was, I wouldn't object to giving water to these people."

"I'm glad they voted the way they did," Merring said noting that the biggest difference in the recreation area without a dam is that it "may not bring as many people into the area. I've never been in favor of a recreation area. Who needs the mess?"

Warren F. Loney, Stroudsburg mayor, said the federal government "got the cart before the horse. They should have had hearings long before land acquisition started. The way it was handled in the beginning was horrible."

Loney said he had mixed reactions to the dam. On one hand, it would have been "a boost to the economy," but on the other, people in this area are "old fashioned and want to be left alone. We were to get nothing from it in the way of water."

"At least people are beginning to become aware we need planning and zoning."

Arlington Martin, Monroe County commissioner, said he was "glad someone made a decision" but added he believes "the project is by no means dead. It has too many benefits. There is no other way to handle the river."

Martin said not building the dam won't hurt the county because "Tocks is a very small part of what's happening in Monroe County." He said he has no intention of asking Congress to go against the governor's recommendation because "Congress represents the whole country, not just Monroe County. I will abide by their decision."

C. Marshall Reese, chairman of the Monroe County Planning and Zoning Commission said, "The construction of Tocks would have had a devastating effect on the area because the federal government hasn't recognized the problems created in the area.

"Planning has been most difficult ... because no one knew what to plan for. Maybe we can be given a timetable now." He said the main problem with or without the dam will be the influx of people to the county's highways which will put a big demand on municipal services.

Jules Marron, former director of the Tocks Island Regional Advisory Council (TIRAC) said, "I still feel it should have been built. It is definitely a severe blow to New Jersey."

Marron said the dam was needed because "there is not a great ground water supply in New Jersey. We need the reservoir and dam."

He said the DRBC's vote was also "a blow to recreation" because a recreation area with no dam would preclude sailing and boating which is "needed recreation."

Alan Gould Jr., president of the Pocono Mountains Chamber of Commerce, said that organization's membership is about evenly divided. "If this is a final decision on the dam by the governors, that, to me, is the most important plus. We are out of limbo. The main controversy is over.

"Now we must work together in the Poconos to face the real danger to our environment that has been overtaking us while we argued about the dam. We need complete and sound planning and land use controls that are enforced."

Robert Uguccioni, executive director of the Pocono Mountains Vacation Bureau said the tourist industry has mixed reaction to the Tocks vote.

"I get the feeling that people from outside think we are all tourist economy-minded. That's not true. The Poconos will have definite tourist gains whether Tocks is built or not."

"The tourist industry is not going to live or die on the Tocks dam. It's not a make or break thing."

Uguccioni said a national park would be a great asset to the area's tourist industry. He said more resort owners have changed their positions to support the dam during the past year "mainly because of the economy. We won't get as many people up here without the dam," he added.

Tocks rejection upsets PP&L

STROUDSBURG — Pennsylvania Power and Light Co. (PP&L) was disappointed in Thursday's vote by the Delaware River Basin Commission (DRBC) to scrap plans for the Tocks Island Dam while Metropolitan Edison Co. (Met-Ed) said it didn't matter one way or the other.

John T. Kauffman, a PP&L vice president said an "assured water supply from the Tocks Island Lake project would benefit Delaware River Basin residents."

He said, "Construction of the Tocks Island Lake project would ensure a future water supply to meet growing commercial, industrial, residential and recreational needs."

According to William N. Strobel, PP&L's environmental control engineer, there sometimes is not enough water flowing in the Delaware River, which would force shutting down two plants at Martins Creek.

The two plants, one which opened this year and the other scheduled for 1977 operation, generate a total of 1.6 million kilowatts. Shutting them down would reduce PP&L's generating capacity by about 25 percent once both plants are in operation.

James Walton, Pocono area manager for PP&L, said the setback at the Martins Creek plants would not induce "brownouts" at the present time but could in the future, depending on demand.

PP&L currently has a generating capacity of 5,693,000 kilowatts which will be boosted to 6,493,000 when the other Martins Creek plant is completed in 1977.

Strobel said times of low water flow occur during prolonged periods of hot, dry weather when air conditioner use is heavy, making the need for maximum generating capacity even more critical.

"Construction of the Tocks Island Lake project would provide adequate stored water to augment the river flow and eliminate the possible need for curtailing electrical generation," Strobel stated.

Met-Ed hadn't intended on using the dam as power-generating source and therefore the DRBC's vote "doesn't matter one way or the other," according to Jack Luigard, Met-Ed spokesman in Reading.

Thomas Kostenbader, spokesman for the local Met-Ed plant said the government-acquired properties along the Delaware had previously been served by Met-Ed, but that other than losing those customers, the dam would have no effect on the service area.

Army Corps won't push for dam

PHILADELPHIA — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers will not push the Congress to override the recommendation of the Delaware River Basin Commission (DRBC) to de-authorize the Tocks Island Dam project, a spokesman said Thursday.

"We won't push to have Congress approve it," said Roy Pirritano, executive assistant. "The Corps won't push for anything or make any recommendation."

Pirritano said it is the DRBC and no one else which makes the recommendation to Congress.

"The Corps has never recommended the project. We were asked to see if it was feasible," he said the DRBC has "always been the lead agency" and that "it's their decision to make" on the recommendation.

Pirritano said the money and time already expended on the project shouldn't be considered lost "because the land acquired could still be used for a limited recreation area."

He said it is now up to Congress to determine the best use for the property purchased by the federal government. He added Congress will also consider the alternatives to Tocks.

"Our expertise is in study and determining feasibility. It is entirely possible Congress may ask us to review an alternative."

Rte. 209 funds may follow dam

OTTAWAY NEWS SERVICE
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — If Congress votes to deauthorize the Tocks Island Dam project this year, there is a good chance the funds to relocate Route 209 will go down the drain with it.

The $4.6 million voted earlier this year by the House to build the new highway was actually an appropriation for the Tocks project that was earmarked specifically for Route 209.

Unless some special agreement is worked out, it appears the Route 209 funds would automatically be eliminated if the Senate deauthorizes the dam.

Even if the dam is not deauthorized, there is a good chance the Senate would refuse to go along with the $4.6 million, forcing a conference with the House.

"The decision by the Delaware River Basin Commission could have a very serious impact on 209," said Rep. Joseph M. McDade, R-10. "There is a feeling among some people not to spend a penny unless they get the whole Tocks project."

"It would be a great tragedy to lose the 209 money," McDade added.

The Tocks Island Dam would have increased greatly the garbage from the area and Cadue said he still expects it to increase somewhat from the recreation area. He said the county is investigating participating in a resource recovery

Tocks — a clash of power in the halls of Congress

By MARK BROWN
Otaway News Service
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — For two incredible years the Tocks Island project has torn through the ranks of Congress, generating a momentum of its own unknown to any other public works project in history.

By 1973 Tocks Island was no longer just a public works project, but a symbol of the escalating clash between engineers and environmentalists.

To many congressmen, Tocks was the ultimate test of whether or not the Army Corps of Engineers would ever again build a major project.

The issue was so divisive that congressmen who lived thousands of miles away tried to spend millions of dollars on the project, even though the lawmakers who represented the Delaware Valley clearly did not want it.

"It became a battle of emotions," said Rep. Joseph M. McDade, R-10, whose opposition to the project during the past two years was a pivotal factor.

"Our conduct was full of passions rather than logic, loudness rather than clear reason. People took as a matter of insult any suggestion that the dam not be built. Very few projects have ever reached that level of emotion," McDade said.

The three men most responsible for stopping the project in congress were McDade, former rep. Howard Robison, R-N.Y., and Sen. Clifford P. Case, R-N.J.

The Army Corps of Engineers was ready to build the dam two years ago. Construction money was put in the appropriations bill before the final environmental impact statement was finished, and without a budget request.

McDade and Robison, both members of the appropriations committee, said they were shocked to find construction funds in the bill.

For two long hours they challenged the funds as the House Appropriations Committee met behind closed doors. The meeting turned into a shouting match, with insults and obscenities being traded left and right.

But McDade and Robison won, securing a pledge that no construction would begin until further environmental studies were undertaken.

Two months later Case put the muzzle on the Senate appropriations panel, and the most serious push ever to build the dam was negated.

"That was the keystone," McDade recalled during an interview Thursday. "If they had started construction that year that was the ball game, even without an environmental impact statement. This was hard ball all the way."

"Fortunately, it appears from subsequent events that our stand was highly important, and that we have been vindicated," he said.

Rep. Fred B. Rooney, D-Bethlehem sat behind his desk Thursday, eyeing a scrapbook filled with newspaper clippings of 10 years ago about the great new dam that would be built in his district.

In his hand he flipped a gavel — the very gavel used when Rooney presided over the House in 1963, the day his bill authorizing creation of the Delaware Water Gap National Recreation Area was passed.

House Speaker John W. McCormack had given him the gavel as a memento, and Rooney has kept it in his private office for the past 11 years.

"In 1963 the entire 15th congressional district (which included Monroe County) wholeheartedly supported the concept of the multi-purpose dam and recreation area," the Bethlehem Democrat recalled.

"The memory of the devastating flood of 1955 was still fresh on everyone's mind. Today this trend is unequivocally reversed. The people want the park, but they want no part of the Tocks Island Dam," he said.

Rooney had hoped that the dam would be completed by 1970, but by 1967 he realized that opposition was forming on the horizon. The reason, he said, was the Vietnam War.

President Johnson, faced with escalating military costs in Vietnam, had impounded funds for Tocks Island and other public works projects, and Tocks started dragging out. The opposition had more time to jell.

"Had it not been for the Vietnam War," Rooney stated, "that dam would have been long completed."

Rooney still dreads the possibility that another flood will strike unless some action is taken towards flood control. "We have to take a long hard look at some of the long-range problems," he said.

"The one good thing that came out of the dam," he mused, "is that we approved the park to complement it. Otherwise that land would have been privately developed at that time."

Petty chasing $2 million in Sunday's Purolator 500

By JOE MIEGOC
Record Sports Editor

LONG POND — Richard Petty can easily surpass the $2 million career mark in winnings with a victory in Sunday's Purolator 500 NASCAR stock car race at Pocono International Raceway, but some other drivers might have different ideas. Practice for the event opens today at 9 a.m. with qualifications Saturday.

Petty is now just $6,207 shy of a plateau in racing history which only one other man, A.J. Foyt, has reached before. A third place finish, worth $6,400, plus whatever qualifying money is added, would be enough to put Petty over the top.

Still, he'll have to contend with drivers the like of Bobby Allison and Donny Allison, Buddy Baker, David Pearson, Cale Yarborough, Darrill Waltrip, Dave Marcis and Benny Parsons. Marcis and Waltrip are two of the young lions doing well on the NASCAR circuit this season.

Baker and Yarborough were running second and third behind Petty last year when a sudden rainstorm, the second of the afternoon, hit and ended the race early, eight laps short of the 200-lap full race. Bobby Allison had also lead during the race before a first rainstorm halted action earlier in the race, but later dropped out.

Victory is the uppermost thought on Petty's mind at the moment.

"Just like I've said, I want to win the championship by running out in front," Petty said, "and I feel the same way about going over the $2 million mark. I'd like to do it with a win."

His average winnings this year have amounted to $6,354 a start, also above what he needs to go over $2 million. That is his "superspeedway" average on tracks larger than 1.5 miles. Pocono's tri-oval stretches out to 2.5 miles and three distinctly different, tough turns.

Petty has needed just 120 races to get this close to $2 million after needing 551 to get his first million, which he won by taking the Dixie 500 at Atlanta in 1971. Both Pearson and Bobby Allison, with 399 races and 315, respectively, passed $1 million quicker than Petty.

James Hylton, also among the 44 cars entered for Sunday's race which will start 40 cars, has been around 10 years and for five years prior to 1965 was a mechanic on the NASCAR scene.

"When I first joined the Grand National circuit as a mechanic in 1960," Hylton said, "we couldn't imagine anybody winning $100,000 in a single season or even think as high as a million in winnings. Things have really changed in just 10 years' time."

In Grand National races this year, Petty has surpassed $175,000 in winnings and has won more than $860,000 in Grand National Races since 1972. All told, the 38-year-old Randleman, N.C., legend has won 172 races, including his win in the first Purolator last year and a victory the season before in a Pocono 500 stock car race for United States Auto Club drivers, including Foyt.

Baker sat on the pole a year ago with an average speed of 144.122 miles-per-hour and holds the late model stock car one lap record at Pocono with a speed exceeding 150 set in the Acme 500 in April of 1974. Baker won the Winston 500 at Talladega, Alabama, scene of next week's Grand National stop, and a second to Petty's first victory ever in the Fire-cracker 500 July 4 at Daytona.

Bobby Allison, who ran very well in the June 29 Schaefer 500 for Penske, will run the Penske Coca-Cola Matador which he used to win the season-opening Riverside, Calif., race and the grueling Rebel 500 in April at Darlington, S.C. His winnings this year have surpassed $75,000.

A total of $102,000 will be up for grabs this weekend, a boost in the purse of approximately $15,000 over the 1974 race. The winner's purse, $14,800 last year, is now boosted to $15,225.

Baker, Petty, Yarborough and Pearson all led last year's Purolator at one time or another before Petty won the rain-abbreviated race.

Golf's the game

By Joe Miegoc, Record Sports Editor

Four area young golfers competed in the Elks Junior Golf Tournament earlier this week at the Brookside Country Club in Pottstown.

Scott Zukowski, the East Stroudsburg High School star who will join East Stroudsburg State College's golf team in the fall, finished 12th with a 36-hole score of 163. George Hamlin, who also competed on the East Stroudsburg High School team that set a Lehigh-Northampton League golf record of 32 consecutive victories over two years while winning two straight league crowns, was 14th at 165.

Pocono Mountain's Mike Rugg, also headed for ESSC, had a 174 and Stroudsburg's Bob Brown a 188.

Tom McAneny of Reading was the winner with a six-over-par 150 for 36 holes, winning by two shots over David Mushinski, also of Reading. Phil Loneragan of Scranton was third at 152, Steve Holachar of Pottstown fourth at 154 and Scott Stattler of Latrobe, Arnie Palmer's hometown, fifth at 155.

Players were quartered at the Holiday Inn and were guests at a banquet at the Pottstown Elks Monday night.

Speaking of tournaments, Mo-Nom-O-Nock pro Vinnie Ciaroni recently won the second annual James McCann Memorial Open at McCann Memorial Golf Club in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., leading a group of 70 pros from the mid-Hudson section of the PGA.

Ciaroni, who finished second in the inaugural event a year ago, had 34-37-71 to beat a pair of golfers tied for second at 72. He had birdies on the second, third and seventh holes and bogeyed the sixth for his front nine of 34. He then had one bogey and eight pars on the back for his 37.

Vinnie also advises that Mo-Nom-O-Nock has recently added 18 sand traps to its course, adding more thinking on the part of the golfers on an already tricky nine-hole layout.

Bob Harrington, who serves as assistant pro at Fernwood under his dad Ed, recently took apart the 18-hole layout to shatter his former course record of five-under-par 67, set earlier this summer.

Bobby had identical nines of 32-32 with eight birdies and no bogeys as he lowered the record three shots to eight-under-par 64. They ought to check that guy's water bottle between rounds.

The Lords Valley Women's Association conducted its halfway tournament this past week, with each player counting her best nine holes of the day.

Low net winners in Flight A were Sue Licker and Alma Nye, while Dorie Finklestein and Joyce Sullivan led the way in Flight B and Flight C honors went to Irene Nagy and Sue Cohen. Gerry Mullens had low putts.

Eleanor Kennel and Anne Portway were winners for the nine-hole players and Chris Robson led low putts.

Tennis chairman Celia Fine, reporting at the luncheon on another sport, said the high scorers in that sport were Carol Clark, Joanne Blum, Sheila Goldman and Ros Rothman for the month of July.

Following the luncheon, golf pro Gene Yanovitch and tennis pro Doc Houk conducted separate clinics.

Albino's is getting into the tournament area with a planned Albino's Open Sunday, Sept. 21 at Evergreen Park Golf Course in Anomink. Starting time will be 1 p.m.

Included in the 18 hole tournament are cart, refreshments at the ninth hole and a full course buffet dinner at the Carriage House restaurant with live entertainment. The field is limited to 36 players and players must register at Albino's no later than Sept. 1.

Prizes for low gross and low net (first, second and third in each category), low putts and closest-to-the-pin will be awarded. John Sibley is chairman of the tournament, which will be played regardless of the weather due to course commitments.

Decides to wait 'until dust settles'

Connors refuses Davis commitment

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — Jimmy Connors, here to work out with the Nastase, said Thursday he would have to wait "until the dust settles" before announcing any decision on whether he would play in future U.S. Davis Cup matches.

Connors took exception to reports he was opposed to the appointment of Tony Trabert as the new U.S. captain.

"I've never said I didn't like him," the cocky, top-ranked tennis star said. "But I am not going to say today whether I will play Davis Cup tennis in the future."

Connors, wearing a pair of ragged cut-off jeans and a tee-shirt with the name lie on the back of it, said he thought he might be able to return to tournament action next week, either at Indianapolis or at Bretton Woods, N.H.

"My leg feels pretty good now," he said. "I didn't play too bad today when I was working out with Nasty."

Nastase, the volatile Romanian known for his run-ins with tennis officials, said Connors would be his "coach" for the $100,000 Louisville Pro Tennis Classic this week.

Connors said he planned to "stick around" until next Monday and work out daily with his side-kick. He reiterated that he was not using his leg ailment as an excuse for his stunning defeat by Arthur Ashe in the Wimbledon final July 6.

"I couldn't have beat him on three good legs that day," he said. He added that he hopes to meet Ashe in another one of his nationally televised Las Vegas matches next Feb. 28.

"The date is already set."

Connors disclosed. "And Ashe is the most likely contender since he beat me at Wimbledon."

Connors merely grinned when he was asked about the new doubles pairing of Nastase and Ashe, who were to play their first match together here Thursday night.

"Maybe my friend Arthur will let me sub for him," said Connors, who has been Nastase's regular doubles partner.

Asked about the multi-million dollar lawsuits he has pending against Ashe and other officials of the pro tennis establishment, Connors replied, "I let my lawyers take care of everything in the courts and I take care of everything on the courts."

Connors had little comment on the cooling of his romance with tennis star Chris Evert.

"All I can say is it is difficult to have a public romance anytime," he said.

Snow schedules clinic tonight

EAST STROUDSBURG — Members of the Pocono Snow Soccer Club will stage a ball handling exhibition and mini-soccer clinic in the Plaza between Wyckoff's and the Sears store in Stroudsburg at 7 p.m. tonight.

The exhibition is being staged to publicize the Sunday contest between the Snow and the Memmingen, German soccer team. That game will be played at 3:30 p.m. at East Stroudsburg State College Stadium as a benefit for the Building Fund of the General Hospital of Monroe County. The main event will be preceded by a junior soccer game featuring Blairtown and the Pocono Snow Midgets. Rain date is Monday at 6 p.m.

On Tuesday, the teams will be rematched in Carbon County at the Panther Valley High School Stadium. The game will be played under the lights beginning at 8 p.m.

Tickets are $2 for adults, $1 for students and are available at Albino's or at the gate.

The Pocono Snow Soccer Club has issued a cordial invitation to the public to attend a reception for the Memmingen booters at Tannersville Inn on Monday night from 8 until 11 p.m.

The reception will be held under the big tent at Tannersville Inn and following German tradition, there will be frankfurters, sauerkraut and beer. The Jolly Rhinelanders will provide German music.

Lenny Moore, Lavelli grid 'Hall' inductees

CANTON, Ohio (UPI) — Dante Lavelli, Roosevelt Brown, George Connor and Lenny Moore will be enshrined in Professional Football's Hall of Fame during ceremonies here Saturday.

Lavelli of the Cleveland Browns, Brown of the New York Giants, Connor of the Chicago Bears and Moore of the Baltimore Colts will all be presented by former coaches.

Paul Brown, now head coach of the Cincinnati Bengals and founder and former head coach of the Cleveland Browns, will present Lavelli.

Lavelli joined the Cleveland Browns of the old All-American Football Conference in 1946 after he was discharged from the Army. He won all-AFC honors in both his first two seasons and later earned all-National Football League honors in 1951 and 1953 after the Browns joined the NFL.

In his 11 seasons, Lavelli caught 386 passes for 6,488 yards and 62 touchdowns. He also played in three Pro Bowl games.

Talmadge Hill, former assistant coach at Morgan State College, will present Brown, who was a 27th round pick of the New York Giants in 1953 and quickly developed into a regular offensive tackle, a position he held for 13 years.

The 6-3, 255-pound Brown was an all-NFL choice for eight straight years from 1956 through 1963 and played in nine Pro Bowls.

Connor during his eight-year career with the Bears won all-NFL honors at three different positions—offensive tackle, defensive tackle and linebacker. In 1951 and 1952 he won all-NFL honors on both the offensive and defensive platoons.

Andy Stopper, former head coach at Reading, Pa., High School, will present Moore, a 6-2, 198-pound speedster when he was the top draft choice of the Colts in 1956 after finishing a brilliant collegiate career at Penn State.

He won Rookie of the Year honors in 1956, earned all-NFL honors five times and appeared in seven Pro Bowls. His 5,174 yards rushing and 6,788 points scored rank him among the lifetime top 20 in both categories.

Moore scored 113 touchdowns and ranks second only to former Cleveland star Jimmy Brown in this category.

Cerebral hemorrhage strikes Gary Sanders

BUENA PARK, Calif. (UPI) — Gary Sanders, 25-year-old professional golfer who was an amateur star at the University of Southern California, was in critical condition Thursday from the effects of a massive cerebral hemorrhage.

Sanders, who makes his home in this area with his wife Linda, was in the intensive care section at Beach Community Hospital.

He was stricken Monday night and admitted to the hospital.

He had already been scheduled to enter UCLA Medical Center for cancer surgery, friends said.

Sanders, a 6-foot, 185-pound athlete, won $6,008 on the pro golf tour this year. Last year he earned a total of $22,665 and had a victory in the Amelia Open, a satellite event held at Amelia Island, Fla.

A 1972 USC graduate, Sanders won the Pacific-8 golf title in 1969. He held numerous amateur honors, winning the U.S. Junior championship in 1966, the Los Angeles City and Southern California amateurs in 1970, the Mexico National Amateur in 1971 and the 1972 Western Amateur. He was a Walker Cup alternate in 1971. He turned pro in 1972.

Bartholomew captures Glen Brook 'T & F'

STROUDSBURG — Betsy Bartholomew was the winner of the T and F Tournament held Thursday by the Glen Brook Women's Golf Assn. Joyce Manzie won the championship Class prize, tying with Mary Downie with the tie broken by comparing cards to the third hole.

Mary Jane McCluskey was the winner of Class A; Ruth Millard, Class B; Tomi Castelli, Class C and Bobby Westbrook, Class D. The putting prize was won by Lynn Talbot with 28 putts.

The nine-hole tournament was won by Rose Steinberg who also had low putts. Ruth Zwick was runner up and Ann Musser had honorable mention.

The championship tournament will begin next Thursday with pairings to be made on Tuesday with individual starting times given.

Nazareth moves Sunday opening

NAZARETH — Nazareth Speedway's show will start at 5 p.m. Sunday because the remainder of last week's show must be completed. Two 25-lap modified features, two sportsman consies, and a 15 lap sportsman feature will be run before the start of this week's racing program.

A spectacular crash on the front chute, which tore down over 100 feet of wheel fence, lights, and wiring, brought an abrupt end to last week's program necessitating the earlier start.

This week's regular show will be a doubleheader sportsman and modified racing card topped off with a disc-jockey demolition derby. Well known recording artist Jill Baby Love will also appear singing her top 10 hit "Bobby's Girl." There will be no increase in admission for this gigantic show.

Top modified drivers expected include last week's winners Gary Balough, and Carl Van Horn. Also, Bobby Bottcher, Charlie Shire, Rags Carter, Frank Schneider, Tighe Scott, Rich Eurich, Buzzie Reutimann, Wayne Reutimann, Tom Hager, Ken Wismer, and Tim Parry are expected. Over 120 cars participated in last week's show.

Next week, on Aug. 10, Nazareth's 24th anniversary fireworks extravaganza will be presented along with a doubleheader stock car racing program starting at 6:30 p.m. This fireworks show is well known as one of the most spectacular on the East Coast each year.

Protection of passer key to collegians' hopes

College 'stars' face Steelers tonight

CHICAGO (UPI) — A tip on the eventual victory should come in the early moments of the annual contest between football's Super Bowl champions, this time the Pittsburgh Steelers, and the College All-Stars tonight.

John McKay of Southern California, coaching the All-Stars for the second time, gave the clue for the national television audience.

"If we can't protect the passer, we'll have very little chance," he said. "If we can't run it'll be almost impossible to protect the passer because they'll know he's going to pass and just tee off on him."

Obviously, oddsmakers figured the Steelers would get to the passer quickly, and stop the Stars running too, since Pittsburgh was made a 17-point favorite to rack up the 30th triumph for the pros in the contest. The Stars have won nine games, but the pros have won the last 10 meetings.

Despite the odds, McKay wouldn't rule out a win for his team. "They all know if we can play real solid defense and get a break or two, we have a chance for victory," he said. "If we just can't slow Pittsburgh down, they're going to get too many points for our offense."

California quarterback Steve Bartkowski, who will start for the collegians, had a similar assessment of the chances. "It's going to be a matter of how much time you have to pass," he said. "These are all a bunch of college guys, and you've asking them to block the world champions and that's not an easy thing to do."

"A lot of all-pro guys have trouble blocking them. I'm sure our guys will give all their best, but there's going to be times they're going to get to you. In any game you're fortunate to get through without being sacked at least once."

Defense was expected to be the key to the contest, and Bartkowski said "there's not a weakness in their pass defense. Their defense dictates the tempo of the game. To be successful we're going to have to establish some sort of running game, let them know we're not going to drop back and throw the ball all of the time."

"Their front four puts such tremendous pressure on the quarterback, all the time, every play. It makes it very easy for their linebackers to get back in their coverage and cover up the deep zones. There's just not a weakness there."

To counterbalance the Steelers, though, McKay said "we've got a good solid defensive football team, with plenty of depth," and one of his stars, deep back Marvin Cobb, agreed.

"There are no weaknesses whatsoever," said Cobb, who also specializes in punt returns. "If somebody goes down, won't start."

there's somebody behind him that's just as good if not better to come take his place."

McKay was uncertain of his starters at all positions since "two or three guys have leg pulls. If they're ready to go, they'll start, because they are better at their positions, and if they aren't ready to go they won't start."

Game commission details dates for hunting seasons

HARRISBURG — Dates of hunting seasons and bag limits for doves, rails, gallinules, snipe and woodcock for 1975 were established this week by the Pennsylvania Game Commission.

The framework for seasons and limits is set up by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Washington following annual surveys of breeding populations. States then select dates for seasons within the federal framework.

Pennsylvania waterfowl seasons will not be established until the latter part of August. The Game Commission cannot set waterfowl seasons until after the federal government draws up its framework, which is not completed prior to late August.

This year the Pennsylvania season for doves will open at noon on Monday, Sept. 1, and will close at sunset on Saturday, Nov. 8.

Daily shooting hours for doves will be from noon until sunset. The daily limit will be 12, with a possession limit of 24 after the first day of the season.

This year's season on sora and Virginia rails and gallinules will coincide with the dove season, opening on Sept. 1 and closing on Nov. 8. There is no open season on king and clapper rails in Pennsylvania.

The daily bag and possession limit is 25 on sora and Virginia rails, singly or in the aggregate of the two species. The daily limit on gallinules is 15, with not more than 20 in possession after the first day of the season.

In 1975 the snipe season will open on Saturday, Oct. 11, and continue through Saturday, Nov. 29. The daily bag limit on Wilson's or jacksnipe is 8, with a possession limit of 16.

The season for woodcock also opens on Saturday, Oct. 11, and will continue through Saturday, Nov. 29. This year's daily bag limit on woodcock remains at 5, with a possession limit of 10 after the first day.

Shooting hours for rails, gallinules, snipe and woodcock are from one-half hour before sunrise until sunset except on the opening day of the general small game season, Saturday, Oct. 25, when there will be no hunting for any wild birds or wild animals in the state before 9 a.m.

A federal migratory bird hunting stamp (duck stamp) is not required to hunt doves, rails, gallinules, snipe or woodcock.

Pocono Mountain baseball

KUNKLETOWN — Rick Meixell belted a pair of home runs, the second coming with a man on in the bottom of the ninth inning, to give Kunkletown a 4-3 victory over Saylorsburg in Pocono Mountain Baseball League action.

Bob Knecht doubled in the ninth and Meixell followed with his second home run to win the game. He had earlier tied the game at 2-2 with a sole homer in the seventh.

Saylorsburg beat Kunkletown, 9-6, in a make-up game of a contest rained out July 13. Al McCormick got the victory.

Strange anniversary

Britain celebrates railroad's birth

LONDON (UPI) — From the dawn of time until a mere 150 years ago this year, man could move no faster than his fastest horse. Then George Stephenson built a railroad.

It changed the world so much that railway-mad Britain is spending months celebrating this 150th birthday of trains.

It's a strange kind of anniversary. Stephenson wasn't the first railway, or even the first to carry passengers. Twenty years of experiments with wooden and iron rails, with horse-drawn trams and inefficient steam engines came before him.

But Stephenson put it all together. Railways were born as a practical proposition with that first dramatic run of his belching great engine to inaugurate the Stockton and Darlington Railway on Sept. 27, 1825.

Stephenson himself drove "Locomotion No. 1," hiding doubts that it could pull such a load. The load was about 90 tons — wagons of coal, a passenger car named "Experiment" and built like a stagecoach, plus wagons with about 650 passengers, mostly workmen and freeloaders who scrambled aboard for the sheer excitement.

Yet Locomotion blithely chugged along at up to 15 miles per hour. When it pulled into Stockton, at the end of Stephenson's 18 miles of track, 40,000 people were there to cheer.

"Overnight, everything changed," wrote Hunter Davies in an anniversary biography of Stephenson. "The face and pace of the world were never the same again."

Stephenson's son Robert built an even more famous engine, the Rocket, in 1829, and father and son launched steam into its golden age. Within a decade "Iron Horses" were puffing across a spider's web of rails covering Britain, Europe and spreading westward across the United States.

Both Stephenson engines still exist. Locomotion stands in Darlington's Top Bank station, and the Rocket is in London's Science Museum.

This summer the Stephenson got a museum devoted largely to them. It opened July 1 in Darlington's newly renovated North Road station, built as part of the original Stockton and Darlington Line.

Other railway museums are scattered across Britain. The biggest — a brand-new national railway museum — is being opened by the Duke of Edinburgh in York on Sept. 27, the actual birthday of trains.

Trains themselves form the most spectacular celebrations of "Rail 150." Steam locomotive display weeks are planned for the towns of Darlington, Stockton and Shildon in August and September.

On Aug. 31 comes a "Grand Steam Cavalcade" at Shildon, with 40 famous trains chugging off on a 2 1/2-hour "Parade of History." Leading the parade will be a full-size working replica of Locomotion which engineering students have spent three years constructing.

The Shildon cavalcade will include such heart-stirring locomotives as the Flying Scotsman, the Leander, the Penderennis Castle. Each is somebody's hobby.

State-owned British Rail long ago retired its steam locomotives, and its 30,025 miles of track are now virtually all diesel or electric. But Britain is filled with railway enthusiasts who rescued droves of engines from the scrap heap.

Their sweat and money keep hundreds of private steam railways operating. More than 300 volunteers own steam locomotives, as individuals or groups, and many own more than one.

What railway fans celebrate, said author Roger Thomas, is not the "dull uniformity of diesel and electric power," but "a system of transportation that seems to retain both character and personality."

Only a ride in a stream-drawn train, he said, can deliver the beloved "clouds of steam, the rhythmic clackety-clack of wheel on track, the whistle, the cinders which get in your eye when you poke your head out of the window."

White House (pretty good)

By RICHARD H. GROWALD
UPI Senior Editor

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House secretaries trot between the carpeted vastness of the West Wing and the press room, fetching reporters who want to badger President Ford's aides about the pluses and minuses of his first year in office.

Aug. 9 marks the first presidential birthday of Gerald R. Ford. Reporters are preparing report cards on his marks.

Doubting that history would regard my opinion of Ford's first year as a worthy benchmark, I left it to the White House. I asked someone with an office terribly close to the Oval Office for a judgment of what has been accomplished. I know the judgment has validity for the judge sits not in an office that gets its coffee in styrofoam. The judge sips his coffee from White House bone china.

He was asked what have been the deeds of note of Ford since he took over from Richard M. Nixon. The man talked of three matters. The first was Watergate.

The aide said that in politics substance is important, showing itself in such things as dealings with Russia and welfare legislation and what to do about the energy shortage. But there is more to politics, he said, there is the importance of symbols — such matters as honesty and trust.

Ford did not by himself defuse the bad odor of Watergate. But, the aide said, Ford has presided over a public opinion pendulum swing back toward respect for and trust in government.

Ford's September pardon on Nixon was needed to clear the air. The aide said Ford felt he could not carry America into a post-Nixon era with the fate of the former president still a live, volatile issue.

According to the lieutenant, accomplishment No. 2 was Ford's presiding over the disappearance of another bugaboo in American daily life — the Vietnam agony.

It was Ford this spring who could fly to New Orleans and win a standing ovation from a gymnasium filled with students by pronouncing the end of America's involvement in Vietnam.

In a way, accomplishments one and two were negative — ending what was past. The aide said that in the month after Ford saw his Republican party walloped in the 1974 fall congressional elections, the President began to come to grips with his own era.

There was the rather embarrassing failure of his WIN program, his call for higher taxes, his realization that despite his deeds, inflation and recession were coming on like tornadoes.

Late in 1974, Ford and his staff began studying in-depth and reorganizing. The President read budgets and other documents that more than reached the ceiling of his office. He evolved his current staff system. He began in earnest his administration.

The sweater is the base of dressing for teens and for misses, too. You'll be seeing a lot of layering this year. We have bigger, bulkier and better sweaters than ever before. We also have long, long lean sweaters in more textures and shapes than you can imagine. Put your own look together today in our ON 2 department. We're really ready for Fall 1975. Shown: Wine button front sweater with a gathered waist. In S, M, L. Wine by HukaPoo... $17.
